

"Bangs" All The Rage Since Duke of York's Fiancee Wears A Set

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon

New York, March 12—If it isn't one thing it's another with the girls. Now that the Ladies' Home Missionary Society and the League to Rid the World of Flappers have put the shiks under the "bob," one might suppose the younger feminine generation would take the hint.

But no. "Be yourself" will never be their policy so long as there's anyone around to copy. Now it's Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon who's to blame.

All over the country, shears are being unsheathed, and snip! off comes more of Milady's locks. This time it's a fringe across the forehead she cuts, in imitation of the Duke of York's fiancée.

Ever since the first photograph of the serious-eyed, shy-mannered young woman who is soon to become Queen Mary's daughter-in-law, reached this country, the girls—who-used-to-be-called-flappers have taken to cutting their hair short in front to match hers.

Just why it should be Lady Elizabeth's "bang" and not her serious mien or her shy manner that has inspired the imitative instinct in the American girl, probably no one but Freud knows. Not content with a straight, mannerly little "fringe," as the English call it, however, the former flapper is twisting the "bang" into weird shapes never thought of by the hair-dresser nor intended by Nature.

Exaggerated cropping of the front hair, outdoing even the famous, hair-raze effect made historic by Lily Langtry, has appeared in New York choruses, and, simultaneously, in every main street in the country in spite of the curbing of the critics, whose disapproval was all that was needed to make the fad a success.

And Living Models to Tell Exactly How They Are Worn

WEDNESDAY at Daniel's—mark it on your engagement card, for then comes the Style Show of St. John, with the extra guidance of Living Models wearing the first favorites of the Mode as you would best understand them.

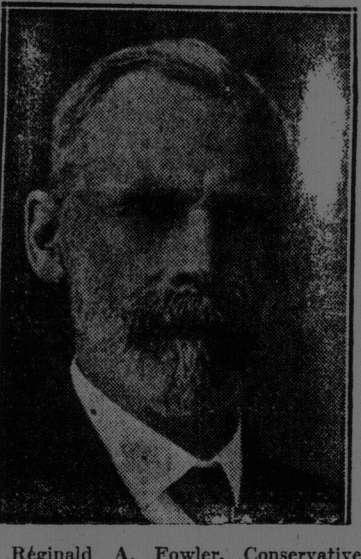

How would you like to be first to see the Tutankhamen trimmings for Dresses that are hardly a week old in New York, the very earliest of the rage for Egyptian embroidery set going by the opening of that wonderful Pharaoh's tomb?

How would you like to be first to view the latest Paisleys?—Or the Deauville Scarf, a bandanna affair that has just become the "piece de resistance" of all the fashionable resorts across the water? The Models in Flat Crepe, the Queen Cloth of 1923—the three piece Suits bloused in soft harmonies of Zingari Crepe, a hand-made Batik coming out—the new Wool Lace trimming, the hem-stitched ones and ever so many others. Not forgetting the Sport Coats and De Lux Wraps for Misses and Matrons.

NOTED LEGISLATOR DIES

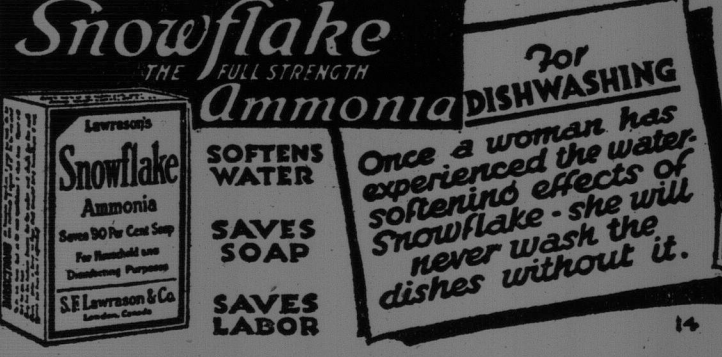

Reginald A. Fowler, Conservative member of the Ontario House for Lennox, died on Monday afternoon. All members of the House joined in eulogizing his memory. He took part in the suppression of the Red River Rebellion, and the North West Rebellion. He was a Canadian-born farmer and a member of the House since 1914.

attentions from others may be received in a spirit of perfect innocence. When reported by the busybody they become distorted, even criminal, in character. 5—Do not resent reasonable discipline of children by their father. Many mothers assume that all chastisement of a child by its father is severe and unjustifiable. Even just men consider this an interference. It may easily engender criminal hostilities. 6—Do not spend too much time with your mother. In such case you may easily spend too little at home for the proper administration of your domestic affairs. 7—Do not accept advice from the neighbors or stress too greatly even that of your own family concerning the management of your domestic affairs. Think for yourself. Have a plan of your own for the solution of home problems. In all cases consult freely with your husband. Much advice of the wrong kind is worse than none. 8—Do not disparage your husband. Your ill-advised opinion of him, uttered in a moment of petulance, may be eagerly seized upon by others as the true measure of his character and abilities. Ideas often become entities. 9—Smile. Be attentive in little things. The smile is an antidote to the toxic effects of ill-humor. Consideration for your husband's feelings makes him respectful of yours. An indifferent wife is often supplemented by an indifferent mistress. 10—Be tactful. Be feminine. Men in last analysis, are but overgrown children. They do not mind coaxing, but they resent coercion. Most men prefer their opposites. Femininity attracts and compels them. By the same token, masculinity in the female repels.
