

Life Pills
Bitters
LIFE PILLS AND BITTERS.
BETTER EVIDENCE—
reading public to the published recently in the of the administration of LS AND PHENIX BIT-
ed the letters above refer-in almost every case they convenience of any sort as medicines, in ordinary out, without feeling their soft in a stronger and better
only applied to each case to ease; and in all cases in that is obtained in a few erally effected in two or

Terms—15 shillings per annum
Vol. VI.

THE CHRONICLE.

Published every Friday afternoon, by DEWEY & CO., at their office in the brick building corner of Prince William and Church streets.
Terms—15s. per annum, 12s. 6d. if paid in advance.—When sent by mail, 2s. 6d. extra.
Papers sent out of the City must be paid for in advance.

Any person forwarding the names of six resident subscribers will be entitled to a copy gratis.
Advertisements—Office open every day, except on Sundays, public holidays, and printing generally, neatly executed.
All letters, communications, &c., must be post paid, or they will not be attended to.—No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid.

Weekly Almanac.

| Day       | Jan. 26   | Jan. 27    | Jan. 28 | Jan. 29 | Jan. 30 | Jan. 31 |
|-----------|-----------|------------|---------|---------|---------|---------|
| Saturday  | 6 40 50   | 2 24 5 10  |         |         |         |         |
| Sunday    | 6 39 5 21 | 3 27 6 40  |         |         |         |         |
| Monday    | 6 38 5 23 | 4 4 8 29   |         |         |         |         |
| Tuesday   | 6 36 5 24 | 5 10 9 37  |         |         |         |         |
| Wednesday | 6 34 5 26 | 5 40 10 39 |         |         |         |         |
| Thursday  | 6 33 5 27 | 6 11 11 30 |         |         |         |         |
| Friday    | 6 32 5 28 | 6 52 12 22 |         |         |         |         |

PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

Bank of New-Brassey.—The Lovell Eq. President.—Discount Days, Tuesday and Friday, Hours of business, from 10 to 4.—Notes for Discount must be left at the Bank before 1 o'clock on the days immediately preceding the Discount Days.
Director next week 11y. Byrd.

Bank of Harris, North America.—(St. John Branch).—A. Scudder, Esq., Manager.—Discount Days, Wednesday and Saturday.—Hours of business, from 10 to 3.—Notes and Bills for Discount to be left before 5 o'clock on the days immediately preceding the Discount Days.
Director next week Hon. John Robertson.

New-Brassey Fire Insurance Company.—John Lloyd, Esq., President.—Office open every day, (Sundays excepted) from 11 to 1 o'clock.—[All communications by mail, must be post paid.]
Savory, Baker.—Hon. Ward Chipman, President.—Office hours, from 1 to 3 o'clock, on Tuesday, Cashier and Registrar, J. D. Jordan.

Marine Insurance.—I. L. Bell, Broker.
Marine Assurance Company.—James Kirk, Esq., President.—Office open every day (Sundays excepted) from 10 to 4 o'clock, on Tuesday, for Insurance to be made in writing.

PARALLEL BETWEEN BONAPARTE AND WELLINGTON.

In turning a parallel between Bonaparte and Wellington it will only be as military captains, and that the profession of arms, and not in the rank sustained by him, as Emperor of the French, and the Duke of Wellington, a subject of the Sovereign of Great Britain.
There was a resemblance in the early career of a man as a profession. This Bonaparte, while a lad, and to the youth who had received his military waters, "I am not now in a situation to reward you, but my merit may earn me the means of doing it at some future period." Wellington, a schoolboy, turned his attention to military studies; and arrived at manhood, chose the army as his profession for life. Being offered a seat in Parliament, he accepted it only on condition of returning to his profession of arms when he chose, and opportunity presented. They both rose regularly through the ranks of the army, from the lowest to the highest.
Bonaparte was distinguished for his rapid movements. He prided himself much on surprising his enemy, and taking him unprepared. Indeed this was a leading trait in his military character; and it was his chief glory, and the source of his fame. He was a man of action, and his plans were bold and daring. He was a man of enterprise, and his operations were marked by a boldness and a dash that were not equalled in the world. He was a man of genius, and his plans were marked by a boldness and a dash that were not equalled in the world. He was a man of genius, and his plans were marked by a boldness and a dash that were not equalled in the world.

“Nec Res, Nec Populo, sed utroque.”

SAINT JOHN, (N. B.) FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1842.

tempting to get in his rear, and brought him to the bay of Pamplico, and the least of rapid and parallel marching to the two armies, in which Wellington proved himself not deficient in celerity of movement and operations; a policy in which Bonaparte's lieutenant did his most experienced troops, with a charge from him that Spain must be made to respect his authority.

In such circumstances, he found need of the highest military talents, but especially the faculty of resource, and the faculty of decision. He was a man of action, and his plans were bold and daring. He was a man of enterprise, and his operations were marked by a boldness and a dash that were not equalled in the world. He was a man of genius, and his plans were marked by a boldness and a dash that were not equalled in the world.

The secret of Bonaparte's great success in the former part of his career was the want of union among his enemies, and the consequent facility which he enjoyed of striking his blow, he threw into disorder the ranks of his enemy, and reconcentrated his plans before they were brought to maturity. In such cases his policy was to make the most of his own strength, and to make the most of his own strength, and to make the most of his own strength.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

being a native of that country was a sufficient disqualification for any appointment to office which any distinguished man looked down upon, or looked upon as his honor. This was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

being a native of that country was a sufficient disqualification for any appointment to office which any distinguished man looked down upon, or looked upon as his honor. This was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

being a native of that country was a sufficient disqualification for any appointment to office which any distinguished man looked down upon, or looked upon as his honor. This was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

being a native of that country was a sufficient disqualification for any appointment to office which any distinguished man looked down upon, or looked upon as his honor. This was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

being a native of that country was a sufficient disqualification for any appointment to office which any distinguished man looked down upon, or looked upon as his honor. This was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French, and it was his general demerit in the eyes of the French.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

The battle of Waterloo was not a contest of arms, but a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains. It was a contest of brains, and it was a contest of brains.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.

Wellington was distinguished for his cool determination, and his steady resistance. In the very important qualification in a general he was perhaps unrivalled. It is indeed true that his great antagonist was not so often tried to the exercise of this military element. Opportunities however of displaying it did not seem to want in him in the great variety of circumstances in which his military career placed him. Now it is said that he was deficient, but that he was not so deficient as Wellington.

The success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy. The very success of Wellington seemed the result of skill and energy, and to command favourable circumstances. This he did not enjoy.