INTERESTING BUDGET FROM NORTH SHORE

The Mayor of Chatham Refers in Plain Terms to Scott Act Informant in That Town.

Chatham, Aug. 24.—Miss Margaret McLean, accompanied by her brother Jack, returned yesterday from St. John.

Roy Barker, of Fredericton, is visiting friends in town.

Douglas VanWart, of Fredericton, who has been visiting Norman MacKenzie, returned home Tuesday.

The death occurred Sunday evening between 9 and 10 o'clock of Mrs. Sarah Turnbull, widow of the late Henry Turnbull, of Stanley. Mrs. Turnbull was 69 years of age, and has resided with her daughter, Mrs. C. T. Munroe, of Fredericton, for several years. Her death was very unexpected and a great shock to her family. Mrs. Turnbull is survived by four daughters, Mrs. C. T. Munroe, Miss Turnbull, and one daughter in the states. The remains were taken Tuesday morning to Stanley where the interment took place.

The special meeting of the town council Monday evening was a very lively session, the principal event being a vigorous defence by Mayor Byrne of the charge laid against him of not trying to enforce the Scott Act. His worship spoke very strongly on the matter and his statement was as follows:

"A duty devolves upon me this evening which I would willingly accept, but I positively refuse to be crucified upon the cross of another man's faults." He began "It is entirely against my inclination," he said, "to inflict this matter upon you gentlemen, and if it were purely a personal matter, I would willingly consign it to the oblivion it deserves. But in view of the charges made against me in regard to Scott Act matters, I feel the public expect a statement from me. That any alderman of this board should endeavor to place on my shoulders the responsibility of the liquor conditions about the town is an insult to the intelligence of you who know of my earnest efforts to better these conditions, as well as to public intelligence.

For the public know well I am a member of the committee, whose duty it is to regulate this branch of civic affairs, by courtesy only. The public know the chief duty of my office is to preside over my meetings. The public know I have never ever a vote at this council, save in case of a tie, and the alderman knows in his heart and soul that I have always taken advantage of what little privileges the by-laws give me to advocate and insist upon the enforcement of measures for the betterment of this town. Indeed, my first act as mayor of Chatham was to call you together unofficially and to secure from each of you, as I believe no other mayor ever did, a pledge to give me your hearty support in suppressing the evils of the liquor traffic. From that instant until now I have been consistent and earnest in my endeavors to attain the ends I pledged each of you to work for. If these statements are true (and I defy this board to gainsay one word of what I say) then what a contemptible, miserable and cowardly attack was so-called friend guilty of, when, knowing that my voice was never silent upon these matters, he thing broadcast through this town that I was a so-called friend guilty of this country and this province, the abominable insinuations contained in a recent issue of his paper.

Gentlemen, I am heartily sorry to have to state the case thus strongly and I repeat it if it were a personal matter only would with pleasure consign it to the pitch hole it deserves; but I feel I owe it to the public to explain the position and I feel I owe it to the majority of this council to state in public that I believe you have labored earnestly to redeem the pledge which you gave me of support. I know the difficulties you have met with; that difficulties exist no more; that the most ardent abolitionists present themselves for election; but in the name of common decency when insincerity gains a seat at this board let it hide itself as well after election as it does before, and not backbite those who are acting in all sincerity.

How ridiculous I could make the alderman, second on my left, appear—Here Ald. Benson objected to personalities, and His Worship replied that he did not intend to do so. He construed his remarks into personal as he had mentioned no name, and His Worship regretted to state that if the Commercial had not been so personal, he would have been spared the painful duty of referring to it at all.

Then His Worship continued: "Know how I could make the alderman appear in the public eye if I rehearsed my efforts in committee to obtain a betterment of the evils existing in our town. How ridiculous he would appear if my charity could not cover the lamentable state of affairs unearthed by the energetic chairman of the police committee some few evenings ago.

In spite of the alderman's anxiety to remedy Scott Act conditions about town, I must remind him that in spite of his public attack he maintained perfect silence at the last meeting of this council. If Ald. Benson thinks I have been more personal than explicit I simply repeat that that is now the place and now is the time to throw up Scott Act matters face to face and to the bitter finish.

His Worship finished amid an intense silence, but Ald. Benson did not attempt to reply and the council adjourned.

WESTERN SENTIMENT IS TURNING AGAINST THE RECIPROCITY PROJECT

Special Correspondence to The Toronto News and Standard.

Saskatoon, Aug. 15.—The crops are still in the balance, and on all sides one hears expressions of impatience over the slowness of the weather. Much alarm has been caused through the district west and south of Saskatoon by the heavy storm which swept over the country last Sunday night. It was at Regina where the sound of hailstones hitting the windows and roofs of the dwelling came like a death knell to those dependent on the outcome of the crops. The hail did not amount to much, however, and the only damage influence was the heavy wind and rain, which beat down many acres of heavy grain. It is just a question whether any portion of this will rise again and be ripened by the harvesting time. On the road north from Regina to Saskatoon, evidences of the storm were plainly visible as far as Lumsden. The greater part of the fertile Lumsden district, however, was untouched, and for a radius of ten miles about Saskatoon the crops never looked more luxuriant.

The continuous rain, however, has stood in the way of the last ripening touches to the wheat and oats. As a motorist always takes advantage of what the wheat looked as if it was more days of hot weather would complete the maturing process. The wheat looking as if it was more days of hot weather would complete the maturing process. The wheat looking as if it was more days of hot weather would complete the maturing process.

While the wet weather prevents activities on the farm, the pastime, and arguments and extemporaneous speeches are encountered everywhere in Saskatchewan district, at the last election, Mr. McCraney, Liberal, won his seat by over a thousand majority, the most of which came from the town. This campaign has a different kind of prospect for Mr. McCraney, Donald MacLean, a popular young lawyer, a "blue-blonde" by the way, has been chosen by the Conservatives to oppose the present member, and it is generally conceded here that Mr. MacLean will receive an overwhelming majority from the city of Saskatoon. Many farmers, too, will support him in the surrounding district. There is a strong anti-reciprocity element in this city, and the proportion of the adjacent rural population in favor of the agreement has greatly diminished in the last two months. Wherever educational work has been done, and there hasn't been a great deal of it done in Saskatchewan either, opinion has changed in a remarkable degree against reciprocity. This fact was demonstrated at a public meeting held here last night, at which more than one farmer voiced his sentiments as follows:

"Gentlemen, I am heartily sorry to have to state the case thus strongly and I repeat it if it were a personal matter only would with pleasure consign it to the pitch hole it deserves; but I feel I owe it to the public to explain the position and I feel I owe it to the majority of this council to state in public that I believe you have labored earnestly to redeem the pledge which you gave me of support. A FRIGHTFUL DEATH. In a useful book recently issued by a real doctor, dealing with The Laws of Life and Health, there are some hints intended for the benefit of the sleepless. We are told that the anti-Rip Van Winkle should lie in the most comfortable position possible, on the right side. The lips should be closed, but not compressed. The tongue should be relaxed, the eyes shut and the bedclothes should be drawn over the exposed left arm. The muscles should be relaxed, beginning at the feet, legs, thighs and arms. You should imagine that the eyes are looking far away to the distant horizon. There are many more suggestions, such as attending to the temperature of the room, etc.

The hints given are no doubt valuable, but they don't seem to go far enough. The learned doctor might, for instance, have added: Keep the big toe of the left foot pointing north-northwest; move the little toe of the right foot up and down at frequent intervals whilst the words, "This little pig went to market," are allowed to pass through the mind. The little finger of the left hand should be pointed towards the north pole; and an eel should be made now and then to wag the exposed ear. If all these expedients fail to induce sleep, then get out of bed, light the domestic lantern and proceed to your neighbor's woodshed and saw about half a cord of wood for him, if he has as much. You will surprise him—agreeably, if the noise you make does not awaken him. If you do disturb his sleep he will very likely get up and put you to sleep in prize ring fashion. But then sleep is what you want. If he doesn't oblige you thus, return to your room, being careful, not to bring your head in collision with anything you may think safe to touch, and hard enough for a decent knock. If none of these extra efforts succeeds in doing the trick, then don't try anything more, but simply go to sleep as soon as possible.

"Walking" is the title of another dear little book. It is not by the author of the book just named. A few of the directions given as to the best way to walk are here reproduced: "Keep an even pace, do not dash off at the rate of six or seven miles an hour, swing of the arms. The toes should be pointed well outwards, for nothing is more ungainly than an attempt to walk with the toes turned the least bit inwards. Wear stout boots, medium weight socks and a cap light in texture. It is a great help in walking, and affords a sort of companionship, to carry a walking-stick, which should be grasped in the centre, held horizontally—not by the handle. Its use conduces to an even gait. Take a straight course, to progress in zig-zag fashion is ugly, and very tiring."

These hints are no doubt, as useful as those concerning sleeplessness, but again do not seem to quite fill the bill. Something like this might have been written in some where to advantage: Be sure to take your walk with you, in case you want to procure refreshments—say peanuts and pink lemonade, for it isn't safe to rely on ways on getting these things for nothing. If you really must smoke whilst walking, let it be cigars, but not cigarettes. Pincushion covers are made of all sorts of materials, but the best are those made of red and white daisy ribbon. If you are the sort of person who goes young girl, by all means make her one of these attractive cushions of daisy ribbon. The work is done on the machine if you are a busy woman; but if there is time to spare, do it by hand, rolling the edges.

A wide border of linen with a flit lace edge makes the handsome cover; but a sum all the way around, having the corners mitered, is very good taste. Pillow covers of a shade to match the bed covers, and covers for the couch cushions, correspond. Slip on over a colored silk lining. Such a set of housekeeper and yet can be had with small expense of time, money and patience.
