Greek Wrestler Defeated Italian

Prokos Lost First Fall But Vadalgi Quit in Second—Said Ribs Were Fractured.

Jim Prokos, the Greek wrestler from Lowell, Mass., was awarded last night's wrestling bout in the Opera House, when Vadalgi, the Italian grappler from Halifax, refused to continue the bout after 11 minutes had gone in the second round.

The Italian won the first fall in 45 minutes with a front body hold after both men had demonstrated to the satisfaction of the fans some very clever wrestling.

In the second round both men worked hard and it was soon apparent that Jim meant to make the round his. After eleven minutes had gone he secured a hold on his opponent, lifted him bodily, and threw him heavily to the mat. Shortly after Vadalgi claimed his ribs had been fractured, and as he refused to continue, the match was awarded to Prokos.

O'Farrell, the Belgian wrestler, refereed the bout. Prokos got $50 from a $250 house. Some discussion took place prior to the match as to what part of the proceeds he was to receive, but Jim refused to go on till the $50 promised him had been put up.

The Greek had a number of supporters present. Two Americans in the crowd each contributed a five to his purse at the conclusion of the show in view of his fine exhibition and the game fight he put up during the match.

SICK SURGEON TAKES BULLET OUT OF SKULL

Dr. W. L. Chapman Wheeled Into Sing Sing Operating Room to Save Man.

USES FINGER IN THE PROBE

Pushes Along Roof of Skull Flattened Pellet for Years Buried Deep in Tissues.

New York, April 1.—Dr. William L. Chapman, of 682 Lincoln place, Brooklyn, made an incision in the skull of Roman Leondowski in the hospital to Sing Sing Prison yesterday afternoon and then, with his forefinger, he loosened from the brain tissue a bullet, flattened and jagged, that had been inside the man's head for almost four years, and moved it along the roof of the skull and out through the opening made by the surgeon's knife. It is too early to tell if the operation was a complete success, but Dr. Chapman and the surgeons who assisted him believe it was. If so, it is expected that suicidal and homicidal tendencies from which Leondowski has been suffering will be removed, and the man will be released from prison after being confined for almost two years after the expiration of his sentence.

Dr. Chapman himself has been ill for some time and under ordinary circumstances would not have performed the operation. But he had been so interested in the case and the possibilities involved that although he was not able to stand he went to Sing Sing and removed the bullet.

How It Was Done

The manner in which Dr. Chapman worked was explained by Dr. Reed, Leondowski was given an anesthetic, and then Dr. Chapman trepanned the skull and removed a section about as large as a silver dollar. Then he opened the dura, or covering of the brain, and ran his fingers into the tissue. Locating the bullet about two inches from the top of the skull, he loosened it with his finger and slowly worked it backward so it traveled a distance of some three inches to the inner wall of the skull to the incision he had made. Then with his forceps he plucked it out. It was rough edged, flattened and about half an inch long. No brain tissue whatever was destroyed during the operation, and there was no bleeding. In the opinion of the surgeons the skull of Leondowski must be remarkably hard for the bullet to have been so flattened from passage through the bone. They were greatly puzzled, too, because the man was able to live with two bullets in his brain.

The surgeons said yesterday that operations on the skull to relieve pressure on the brain are many and occasionally are successful as a cure for insanity. But this is the first time of which they have knowledge that a bullet was removed from a man's brain to restore it to normal functioning. The exceptional difficulty in Leondowski's case lay in the fact that the bullet had been in his skull for so long a time, and the one in the visual area behind the ear was covered with a growth of tissue.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing said last night that Leondowski would be kept there until he is able to travel. He will then be returned to Dannemora, where he will be watched until his mental condition has been determined. If he becomes normal he will be released.

While Robbing Home Burglars in Fashionable District Get Glass of Water for Woman, Tuck Kids in Bed.

Chicago, April 1.—Burglars of Chicago operating in fashionable neighborhoods, have all the class and camaraderie that characterize the set they travel in for the moment. To this Walter I. Zigwitz, president of the Chicago Machine Company, will testify.

Awakened last night by a noise beneath the bedroom window of his Park Ridge home, Mr. Zigwitz shouted, "Who's there?"

"We're just a couple of burglars coming to pay you a visit," was the reply. "Get back into bed, we'll be in soon."

The burglars kept their promise. Seated on the edge of a window seat they questioned the householder and his wife with easy freedom.

Mrs. Zigwitz felt faint. She told one of the men so.

"Wait, I'll get you a glass of water," said the burglar.

When he returned with the water he announced their intention of taking a few things, including an automobile, and said the latter would be found early in the morning nearby.

Expressing great solicitude over the children and tucking them neatly in, the men made away leisurely with $10,000 worth of furs, jewelry and clothing. No silverware, with which the house abounded, was touched. The car was found near the house early in the morning as promised.

"They were all right," Mr. Zigwitz said. "They sure were fine to my wife and the kids."

Bars Girls From Seeing The Cadets

Boston, April 1.—Because the boys of the East Boston High School Cadets were slow to execute the movement "eyes right" when the girls of the school were spectators on the left, Principal Bertram C. Richardson barred the girls from watching drills.

A hundred lads absented themselves from formations yesterday in protest, and the headmaster was waited upon by a committee of girls, who requested that he reconsider the ruling. He declined on the ground that progress would be made while the boys in ranks divided thought between dresses and a drill.

With the girls out of sight, Principal Richardson thought the boys had a chance to master the manual and gain honors for the school in the Irish drill next month.
