Hickman.

Mr. W. Albert Hickman is leaving for Great Britain again shortly to continue the work of bringing New Brunswick into ice in the old country, which was prominence in the old country, which was started in the early part of this year.

"In a letter to The Telegraph some time ago," said Mr. Hickman, "I gave a general outline of the work in Great Britain as it has been carried on up to the present. There were, as was the original intention, a number of lectures given especially in the south and west of England, the result of which was to bring in a great deal of inquiry relative to the province. This, with the aid of publications of different sorts, was answered as fully as pessible. There had been, perhaps, 3,000 or more applications of one sort or another for information up to the time I left England. Of these a considerable number of people—100 I should say—had stated their intention of coming out, and as Mr. Colmer, the secretary to the office of the high commissioner for Canada, had told me that I need expect no direct results to the first year, I felt that even these few were encouraging.

come out and get a three years' training that country without paying a cent for it, and that, from any standpoint, is a decided advantage and should satisfy anyone. From Mr. Pratt's point of view he gets all his labor, which, as you well know, is the greatest problem in connection which farming in this country, given, of course, that the man who is farming understands his business—absolutely free, and these boys, after one year's training, during which time they do all the work themselves, are not to be despised. Suppose that even 25 young men went on Mr. Pratt's place, the result would be—even supposing for the sake of being conservative that each would do ofhe-half the work of an ordinary man, for which premise the gets all his labor, which, as you well know, is the greatest problem in connection with farming in this country, given, of course, that the man who is farming understands his business—absolutely free, and these boys, after one year's training, during which time they do all the work these boys, few were encouraging.

"These people have been coming out in small numbers more or less steadily, no party up to the present running over ten, though a party of twelve or thirteen is expected this week. We, do not encourage them to come out in the autumn, advisition of the come of the come out in the autumn. them, in any case, to wait until the

"As to the class of people I may practically say that they may have been med from every walk in life; from gentlemen or comfortable income to laborers who have had but a few shillings on landing. I must say that without exception, though, they have that without exception, though, they have then a most desirable class of immigrants, been a half a shan a continent of Europe. However, I do no wish to consider the few people who have come this year—perhaps sixty or a few more—as at all typical of what I hope the ultimate results of the scheme from an immigration point of view will be.

"There would be some arrangements necessarily made if any great number came to New Brunswick. The people who apply for information very soon demonstrate the need of arrangements, to face onstrate the need of arrangements to fe cilitate their rapid settlement in the prov

Boys of this class will have sufficient capital to farm very comfortably, in fact as English gen tlemen though not sufficient capital to make theur large farmers in Great Britain. Thus, they are in a position to attain independent as soon as they are through with their training. Now, in the past a number of these boys have been sent to Canada and have paid premiums sometimes as high as £100 per annum to farmers who were supposed to give them a good practical knowledge of farming. The scheme, for knowledge of farming. The scheme, for a variety of reasons, usually failed to work. One of these was that the farmers would pocket the $500, reduce the pupil to the status of a laborer until his life became unbearable, when he would leave, and the farmer would be open for new pupils. This plan was a tremendous success from a financial point of view as far as the farmer was concerned, and involved less labor than ordinary farming, but the government, of course, saw the folly of the wholt thing which reflexly did the country much harm, and now the Canadian office in and now the Canadian office in harm, and now the Canadian office in Great Britain takes great pains to warm parents against the premium system. "Another method for the boys and one that was more successful, was to send them to an agricultural college, such as that at Guelph. Ontario, where they paid for their tuition as in any college or university. On modification of this plan the various colonial colleges were established. various colonial colleges were established in Great Britain with a view of giving the boys a training to colonial life. That would seem rather unpractical, would it not? I do not see how colonial colleges established in England, could be expecter to give any practical knowledge of life in the Dominion of Canada. That is precise-ly the idea that struck Mr. Pratt when he proposed starting

A Training Farm in This Province.

He arrived in this country hardly a month ago. His plan differs from that of an agricultural college. Simply in the fact that in Mr. Pratt's scheme the work is all ctical. There are no lectures, but sim y necessary explanations to the student the reasons for doing certain things of the reasons for doing certain things. The scheme of this training farm also differs from that of an agricultural college in that the students do not pay directly any tuition fees. They are charged for the first year at least enough to cover their board, say £40, as for that year they are of very little service and are bound to injure, to a considerable extent, the farming impliments, which in itself would be a considerable item of expense. After the first year the boys are of a great deal of service, especially under the intelligent of service, especially under the intelligent tuition of such a man as Mr. Pratt, and their labor should more than pay for the

Proclamation Issued.

Ottawa, Oct. 9-(Special)-An extra Canada Gazette was issued this afternoon containing the proclamation announcing the dissolution of parliament. As polling takes place four weeks from tomorrow, the campaign will be remarkably short. That it will result in a return of the Laurier government with increased majorities is equally certain. Now that writs are issued and the fight is on, leading Conservatives here admit that there is no chance of defeating the administration. The principal topic now is what majorit, the Liberal government will have. Active workers in the Conservative ranks think it will be reduced, while the Liberals are ifident that it will be increased. Many Conservatives say that even with a good cause they could not expect to succeed as long as Sir Charles Tupper leads. The Hugh John farce is making the party still more ridiculous. No one would know here that a general election is in progress unless from the noise of family quarrels going on among Conservatives.
