A FAREWELL.
Do not tell me to forget thee!
Thou hast found my memory true,
Since the day when first I met thee,
With the roses on thy cheek,
Thou wert of my life a part.

This hopeless love hath so enwound thee,
I cannot tear thee from my heart;
All my hopes are centered round thee—
Thou art of my life a part.

Deeply, fervently, I love thee,
Do not, do not, forsake me;
Years will pass, years have proved me,
Years which brought but vain regret.

Fondly to my heart I pressed thee,
Breathing of the blissful past;
And I kissed thee and embraced thee—
Kissed thee through the falling tears.

I will go; I cannot claim thee;
We will meet no more in life;
Sister, Friend, I cannot name thee,
Since I may not call thee Wife.

I will go; but ever round thee
I will pine my being, like a light;
Now I bury thee from my sight,
Now I bury thee from my sight.

In my heart's deep, strange recesses,
A shadow dwells like the night,
Lips, and eyes, and golden tresses,
Shrouded—cold—in crystal sleep.

I will go; but ever o'er's
A shadow dwells like the night,
Lips, and eyes, and golden tresses,
Shrouded—cold—in crystal sleep.

Coral will be one of the fashionable ornaments next season. Those cut in the shape of stars and made to fit the ear a studs, are newly imported and very prettily. There is no demand for imitations.

A Canadian foundry has just turned out a large piece of forging that was ever produced in England or the United States. New Yorkers have hitherto considered themselves ahead in this business.

A widow once said to her daughter "when you are at my age, it will be time enough to dream of a husband." "Yes mamma," replied the thoughtless girl "for a second one."

A tall, interesting looking man fell to his side on the east side of Broadway New York, Tuesday. He was quick, surrounded by a crowd, some of whom said that he had a fit. A Custom House inspector who was present asked him what ailed him. He replied in a faint voice: "I am starving; I haven't eaten anything in six days."

Among the speculators ran into a restaurant opposite the Adams Express Company's office for a loaf of bread, which, however given him, he devoured eagerly. He gave his name as "John W. Bidwell" and that he was born in Maine. He was taken to the hospital.

The Great Bank Forgers—The Plot to Rescue them from Newgate Prison (From the N. Y. Sun)

The story of the plot to liberate the Bank of England forgers from Newgate Prison, was obtained yesterday from Mr. William A. Pinkerton, the well-known detective, who was in London previous to and during the trial of Macdonnell and his associates.

He arrived here on Sunday. Mr. Pinkerton says that the London officers learned of the attempt to free the prisoners by accident. Three Americans were the instigators of it. John W. Bidwell, a farmer and Justice of the Peace at Mackinac, in the State of Michigan, Michigan, was one of the number. He is a brother of the Bidwells. The others were a cousin of George Macdonnell from Brooklyn, and a man who passed under the title of Major. They began by operating the turnkeys of Newgate, whom they had liberally bribed. They did not proceed very far with their communications before a suspicion of the turnkeys led to the discovery by the officers of their designs.

A London detective met the jail officers one evening in a tavern. He reported this to Scotland Yard, and a detective who was unknown to them was detailed to watch the jailers' movements. He sat at their back while they were riding on the top of a stage coach and overheard them discussing plans for the release of the forgers. He learned from their whispered conversation that they had been promised £1,000 each by the Americans for their services, and that they had already received the first instalment of the money. They were to receive the bulk of it the moment the forgers stepped outside of Newgate. The day following the stage incident one of the bribed turnkeys was intercepted as he was leaving the jail, and on being searched he was found in possession of letters addressed by Macdonnell and one of the Bidwells to those who were plotting their escape. The letters contained full proof of their intentions. The turnkeys were placed under arrest, and are awaiting trial.

The Michigan Justice and his two confederates fled from London to avoid the punishment which threatened them. Five years' imprisonment would have been their sentence if convicted. The Old Jewry Sergeants made a searching investigation of the plot, during which they found out in some way of a most tricky which the relatives and friends of the forgers contemplated swindling the turnkeys. The latter were to be handed their bribes as soon as they opened the avenue of escape. The money packages were to be padded out in such a way as to appear as if they each contained £1,000 in Bank of England notes, while in reality there was not to be one-tenth part of that sum in them.

A Lively Night in Poches. (From the Poches Record, Sept. 4.)

Night before last Poches, or at least a certain portion of its inhabitants, got drunk. There were drunks in the saloons and drunks in the streets; drunks dancing in a "hurly" ball room, drunks lying on sidewalks and boot-black stands, and more drunks affectionately kissing their noses. There were larger drunks and whiskey drunks; there were peacocks and belligerent drunks—in short, there were drunks of all imaginable kinds in every conceivable place. One lot of German drunks sang "Die Wacht am Rhein," with all the rich beauty of tone natural to the natives of Paderborn until 1 o'clock, and then indulged in a sociable knockdown. Some whiskey drunks amused themselves by sticking bowie knives into barroom tables, and in "salting" their whistlers' around each other's ears. Besides tripping the light fantastic toe at the Lancaster street "hall," the honest midgets indulged in the interlarchean act in the "hurly" houses. The various "drugs" were extremely happy, and the keepers of all games rejoiced. All these things taken into consideration, with many others which we did not see, we must say that the town was quite lively.

A Ballroom Ascension from Buffalo.
BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 16.

At precisely 7 o'clock this afternoon Prof. J. A. King, accompanied by Walter T. Chester of the Buffalo Courier, James Albro of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, Luther L. Holden of the Boston Journal, and Geo. E. Nichols of the New York Herald, made a successful ascension in the balloon Buffalo. Fully 75,000 people witnessed the event. The balloon took a southeasterly course, and floated majestically over the city, distributing copies of the Herald (paper) in her way. The party expect to make the longest island voyage ever made, providing the weather will admit. The day was beautiful and the weather calm. At 3.15 p. m. the course was due east. The balloon held 25,000 cubic feet of gas.
