SEPTEMBER 21, 1912

CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN FRIENDLY TALKS TO YOUNG MEN

Of late you have noticed that your respectable friends do not care to re-main long in your company. When they see you coming they cross over to the other side of the street; or, if you hold other side of the street; or, if you hold them up where they cannot escape their conversation is very brief. You attempt pleasantry with them and even old-time familiarity, but they all seem to be distant and even frosty. You pretend not to understand why they act so, but you present that they know you are not not to understand why they act so, but you suspect that they know you are get-ting a savory reputation. They don't see you at Mass on Sunday or at the alter rail once a month. There was a time when you were faith-ful to your duty; but now since you hanker for the name of being a " young man about towa," and are an aspirant for recognition by the "smart set," you ought to see that you are rendering yourself unfit for the company of clean-minded people. yourself unfi minded peop

Your dear mother, for some time, Your dear mother, for some time, lovingly and continually has tried to get you to accompany her to Confession, and to comfort her as well as to edify your friends, by going with her to Holy Communion. You know with what result, and you know better than any one else, the real obstacle that prevented you-simply this, you have gone wrong. You don't intend to give up your evil ways and your bad associates. The old influences for good are yet strong in you and you have to battle strong in you and you have to battle against your better self, so you try to smother your conscience by various excuses. You should remember that other people know that "no rogue e'er felt the halter draw with good opinion of the law." While you might reject this as a theory you do not hesitate to put it into practice. Therefore, you bethis as a theory you do not residue to put it into practice. Therefore, you be-gin to try to cast out of your mind the same, sound and logical principles of faith, morality and obedience which you learned so well. So the law condemns you. Abolish it. You have heard some other sensual-ist say that "he does not intend to let any man tell him what to do or what to avoid." You think such independence is worthy of boast. The devil of pride and conceit has such a hold on you that you begin to question vigorously whether the law has any right to im-nose obligations upon you without your pose obligations upon you without your previous assent. Hold on. You have forgotten a few things. My dear youth, God and His infinitely wise laws existed a long time before you did, and He did not have to before you gave any any lor your apbefore you did, and rie the nor nor ap-await either your arrival or your ap-proval. He managed the world for thou-sands of years before you existed, and if you should die to-night, it is quite probyou sho that He could struggle along without your aid.

It will not do to say that you do not It will not do to say that you do not know that His ways are beneficent, just and applicable to you. You may be purposely and criminally ignorant of much that would be very valuable for much that would be very valuable for much that would be very valuable for you to know, in fact your neglected catechism told you when you were a child, and still tells you, that you are in this world to know, to love and to serve this world to know, to love and to serve God, and if you are stifling your con-science by wilfal ignorance of what you ought to know, please don't allege it as a mark of superior ability and as an ex-cuse for a bad and irreligious life.

Sensible people would only pity your attempt to deceive yourself and them. They would tell you that even the civil law does not admit vincible ignorance for of its statutes as sufficient excuse of its statutes as summer execute for the four from benatty incurred by that you are weak; that you cannot violation of the law. Your bluff is too make successful battle against all your simple, and, if allowed, would make all wicked thoughts, and the wicked exsimple, and, if allowed, would make all

Just remember that you used to say in your Act of Faith, that " God cannot deceive yon and cannot be deceived by yon." This siways was true, and always will be true, no matter how much your pride and sensuality may re-bel against it.

much your pride and sensuality may re-bel against it. Don't try to explain your excuses by which you attempt to justify your sin-ful life. I mean just what I say. Your excuses are worthless. You know it in your own conscience. Don't try to bolster them up by allusions to the ex-ample of other men who are or have been notorious for their evil life. Don't onote from the writings of infidels, who, been notorious for their evil life. Don't quote from the writings of infidels, who, like yourself, first violated the com-mandments of an all wise God and then looked about for some kind of a plea to banish Him and His laws from His own world world. Neither you nor they can do it. Your exquese are thin and illogical. Your attempts to explain them will involve you in still greater confusion of mind and in grossez sins. You know that others are bound to observe the law, world.

others are bound to observe the law, and that you are no more exempt than they. What is sin for them is sin for you. Make up your mind now, that a little worm like you, who may be any-where from forty-eight to seventy-eight inches long, is not big enough, strong enough or wise enough to fool God, man and the devil. Any one of these is tre-mendously too powerful for you, and it is about time that you had the sense to realize it.

realize it. Don't throw away your health, your morals, your manhood in order to keep morals, your manhood in order to keep pace with a set of gilded youth, who glory in the service of Bacchus and of Venus, whose life is in contempt before God and man, and whose only possible end is destruction. Their minds run in no higher moral planes than that of the frog, the tomcat and of barnyard poulfrog, the tomost shit of barbard point try. Remember, that "what things a man shall sow, those and nothing else shall he reap." The bad trees of inde-cency, dishonesty and irreligion cannot produce good fruit. Not even all your bility can make this possible. Now, pay attention. The Scripture tells you that "This is the will of God, your sanctification." This is intended for you. It means that you must lead the life of a saint. Perhaps you will be the life of a saint. Fernaps you will de much amused to think that any one could expect to make a saint out of such material as you are. But it is God's purpose, nevertheless, whether you be-lieve it or not, even if the prospect of lieve it or not, even if the prospect of crimes, its accomplishment does seem so im-probable. It rests with you. God de-mands it. He has given you every means, every facility, every chance. Nothing is lacking except your appreciation of the fact and your process use of the mean fact and your proper use of the means

It is abaurd to say that your sancti-fication is impossible. God is wise and just. He never demands the impossible; He says, "My yoke is sweet and My burden is light;" He also says, "He that believeth not shall be condemned." We must remember that the God Who speaks thus is absolutely just, and that it is impossible for Him to condemn any one who does not richly deserve it.

one who does not richly deserve it. So, then, those who will not believe His words and will not regulate their lives in accordance with His purpose, His laws, His Church and His Sacra-ments deserve punishment for their wilful and voluntary rejection of His infin-itely wise and loving moral guidance and protection. You know from actual experience

NA DRUCO

CREA

THE CATHOLIC RECORD

can do nothing," and -- " If I speak the truth to you, why do you not believe Me?" That's it. Why not? What is the obstacle? What is the reason that you will not apply to yourself what you know is sound doctrine when applied to others? Why are you anxious and with "itching ears" listening to false teachers that you know are wrong, eagerly searching for some excuse to justify your evil deeds? Your project that I wald "arouse "I

You notice that I said "excuse ;" I You notice that I said "excuse;" I did not say a "reason;" there is a vast difference between the two. It is simply impossible to find a reason to justify any same Catholic for a wilful violation of God's moral law. Then why do you seek it hither and thither, spending vastly more time, energy and why do you seem it nitner and thitner, spending vastly more time, energy and brain fag in attempting to evade your obligations than you would give in search of the right. Well may we say, "O judgment, thou ard, fied to brutish beasts, and men have lost their reason."

Now frankly. What profit have you gained from all your evil thoughts and your wicked actions? Think it over. What do you expect from to-morrow and the day after, and from all the days, and the day after, and from all the days, few or many, until death comes to call you away, whether you are ready or not? Is every new day given to you by Almighty God solely for the purpose of hesping up new offenses, new sins, new more neglect and more contempt ! Now, boy, enough has been suggested Now, boy, enough has been suggested to show that your dear mother is right. Do as she says: Go to confession. Be a man. Be what you know you ought to be, and what, through the grace of God, you know you can be .-- Pilot.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS THE HONEST ERRAND BOY

That boy thinks that "a good name is That boy thinks that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," for he has found a goldpiece that the gentleman dropped, and he runs eagerly to give it back. At first he says it is not his, but the boy says : "Yes, indeed, it is ; I saw it drop from your hand when you naid a cahman."

when you paid a cabman." "Why that was many streets back !"

said the gentleman. "Yes, he knows; he ran all the way, as hard as he could ; he has had a job to catch him."

catch him." "Are you a very rich boy, that you can afford to give up a gold-piece when you find one?" said the gentleman. "Rich, sir ? I have $1 a week as evrand boy. But the money was yours, sir, not mine. I like to earn my money, not to steal it." The gentleman smiled ; but only said, eir different ways. A month or two afterwards, when the

READ THE WORDS OF ONE WHO SUFFERED

CONSOLATION

Perhaps you have felt at times the effect of merely human kindness and have been relieved by slight attentions which were indications, like spars in the changing tides or straws in the shifting enanging tides or straws in the similary winds, of deeper and intenser movements. You forgot thus for a time your suffer-ing. You will appreciate, then, the way St. Paul feit for his brethren, and way St. Paul felt for his brethren, and from the picture he draws of his heart in sorrow and from its undoubted power to relieve, you will know what powers a more tender, a more sorrowing Heart can have. Think then of these passages of the zealous apostle. Recall his con-cern for the Jews whom he longed with a mort we longing to bring to Christ. cern for the Jews whom he longed with a martyr's longing to bring to Christ. "I speak the truth in Christ, I lie not, my couscience bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost that I have great sadness, and continual sorrow in my heart. For I wished myself to be anathema from

I wished myself to be anathems from Christ for my brethren, who are my kinsmen according to the fiesh." You who suffer so much, will be surely touched at the devotion of one whose heart aches like yours and with an unself-ish sorrow. Recall, too, how St. Paul wrote a letter of reproof once to the Corinthians and then wrote sgain to console them after his severe repre-Corinthians and then wrote sgain to console them after his severe repre-hension. No doubt, you have had at rare intervals the letters of some friends who could make you forget your troubled heart for a long time. Then you will know that St. Paul had his heartaches, as many another has and knew how to console others, too. "I determined this with myself," he wrote, "not to come to you sgain in sorrow. For if I make you sorrowful, who is He then that can make me glad but the same who is made sorrowful, who is He then that can make me glad but the same who is made sorrowful by me? And I wrote this same to you that I may not, when I come have sorrow upon sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice, having confi-dence in you all that my joy is the joy of you all. For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote to you with many tears not that you should be made many tears, not that you should be made sorrowful but that you might know the charity I have more abundantly towards you." Some of these words may not be fully understood without study, but one read-ing will afford you a glimpse deep down into the heart of St. Paul, and will give you a view of another aching heart. That knowledge and that sight will belp you and however you for the heart of you and prepare you for the heart of infaite sympathy and infinite sorrow.— Rev. F. P. Donnelly, S. J.

THE TRUE FAITH

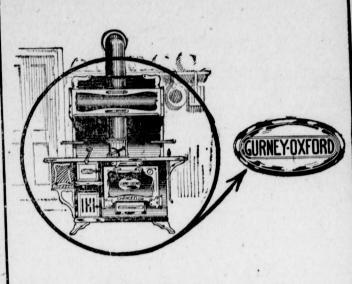

R. C. Gleanor tells this pointed little story in his department of the Catholic Columbian : Two boys, a non-Catholic, the other a Catholic, were asked by a person of in-quisitive mind why it was wrong to lie and steal. The non-Catholic lad an-swered that it wouldn't be right because his parents and tachers told him not the his parents and teachers told him not to do so. The Catholic lad gave a ready do so. The Catholic has gave a term answer to the effect that to lie and steal was a sin against God's commandments. And that reminds us of an incident that took place some time ago in a cer-tain State Normal school. In one of tain State Normal school.

that took place some time sgo in a con-tain State Normal school. In one of the lower departments the teacher appeared to take special delight in annoying a small Catholic boy who had the misfortune to be in her class. One day when there were visitors present, the lady pedagogue asked Charles: "What is the difference between the Catholic and non-Catholic religion?" A question, by the way, which should have earned for her instant dismissal. Of course, her idea was to embarrass the boy. It took the little fellow some time to answer, but at last he arose and very modestly said: "The Catholic re-ligion was founded by Jesus Christ. ligion was founded by Jesus Christ. The non-Catholic religion was founded by men who thought they could improve on the work of Our Lord." There was no comment when he sat down and the class was shortly thereafter

7

Only Results Count

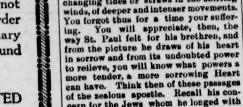

The one thing above all else that you want to know about the range you buy is this-that it will cook and broil and bake with absolute satisfaction.

Other features of a range, such as convenience, economy and appearance, are, of course also indispensable, but the prime necessity in a range is results in cooking. The Gurney-Oxford gives results-not now and then, but always.

Every Gurney-Oxford is a source of continual satisfaction to its owner. Day after day, year after year, it enables her to produce pastry, bread, roasts that contribute to the pleasure of housekeeping. That is why the Gurney-Oxford finds its strongest support among those who have had actual and intimate experience with it. You too will number your Gurney-Oxford among your best friends.

The Gurney Foundry Co. Limited TORONTO - CANADA

MONTREAL HAMILTON WINNIPEG CALGARY VANCOUVER

MONTREAL BOYS WITH NO CHANCE

"What has been done can be done again," said the boy with no chance who became Lord Beaconsfield, Eng-land's great prime minister. "I am not a slave, I am not a captive, and by energy I can overcome greater ob-stacles."

Jewish blood flowed in his veins, and Jewish blood flowed in his veins, and everything seemed against him, and he remembered the example of Joseph, who became prime minister of Egypt four thousand years before, and that of Daniel, who was prime minister to the greatest despot of the world five cen-turies before the birth of Christ. He pushed his way up through the turies before the birth of Christ. He pushed his way up through the lower classes, up through the middle classes, up through the upper classes, until he stood a master, self-poised, upon the topmost round of political and social power. Rebuffed, scorned, ridi-culed, hissed down in the house of com-mons, he simply said, "The time will come when you will hear me." The time did come, and the boy with no chance but a determined will, swayed the scepter of England for a quarter of a century.

A century. Henry Clay, the "mill-boy of the slashes," was one of the seven children of a widow too poor to send him to any but a common country school, whe was drilled in the "three R's." H But he used every spare moment to study without a teacher, and in after years be was a king among self-made men. The boy who learned to speak in a barn, with only a cow and a horse for an andi-ence, became one of the greatest of American orators and statesmen.

George Stephenson was one of eight children whose parents were so pool that all lived in a single room. George that all lived in a single room. George had to watch cows for a neighbor, but he managed to get time to make en-gines of clay, with hemlock sticks for pipes. At seventeen he had charge of an engine, with his father as fireman. He could neither read nor write, but the engine was his teacher, and he was a faithful student. While the other hands were playing games or loafing in liquor shops during the holidays, George was taking his machine to pieces, cleaning it, studying it, and making experiments in engines. When he had become famus as a great inventor of improven in engines, those who had loafed and played called him lucky. These instances could be multiplied

These instances could be mutplied indefinitely. They go to show that suc-cess is due, not so much to position, or place, or time, but to the man !— Father's Newsboy's Journal.

THE PUNCTUAL GIRL

The punctual girl is always a thought ful girl. She is the girl who does not delay in doing an errand ; who never ful girl. keeps the breakfast waiting while she repairs some forgotten damage to her clothes. No one is ever kept waiting while she sews a rip in her dress or a break in her glove. These things are all done in season. She never puts off The gentieman smiled; but only said, putting the gold piece in his pocket, "Well, thank you, my lad; good day. Say ! where do you live?" The boy told him, and then they went their different ways.

That is Yours

To Protect the Beauty

and to enchance it, if that be possible, is a duty none the less binding because it has been made so agreeable. That duty centres in Beauty's chief expression, the skin.

With intelligent care and the regular use of such perfect preparations as Na-Dru-Co Ruby Rose Cold Cream and Witch Hazel Cream, you can preserve its bloom in spite of exposure to burning sun or dry, dusty, scorching winds.

NA-DRU-CO Ruby Rose Cold Cream

does much more than keep the outer skin soft and supple-it feeds the underlying tissues, fills out the tiny hollows, prevents wrinkles, and gives a fresh and wholesome charm. With its subtle odor of fresh roses, and the soothing sensation which it imparts, Ruby Rose Cold Cream is a toilet gem.

In opal glass jars, 25c. at your druggist's.

NA-DRU-CO

PER OL

WIICH

HAZEL

GUILO

ED U

NA-DRU-CO Witch Hazel Cream

is a refined and altogether delightful preparation of Nature's own cocling, healing specific, Witch Hazel. Under its soothing influence roughness, chaps, sore lips, sunburn, windburn or irritation after shaving vanish like magic. Used freely after washing it keeps the hands and face soft and comfortable.

25c. a bottle, at your Druggist's.

Always look for the Na-Dru-Co Trade Mark when you buy.

National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited.

A month or two afterwards, when the boy had forgotten the circumstances, he found a gentleman seated in the room with his mother when he came home from work. He recognized him at once. The gentleman had come, he said, to offer him a situation; it was one of I great trust, and he offered it to him be-cause be had proved himself worthy of trust. That boy's "good name" had stood him in good stead.—Sunday Com-panion.

panion. SENSIBLY SPOKEN Only a month ago a boy of seventeen went down Market Street looking for a situation. He went into a large store and asked if they wanted a boy. Said the proprietor: "I suppose you think you can do about everthing, don't you?" "No," said the boy, "I can't do any-thing; I have never been in a place. But I can try to do anything you tell to

"I won't be worth much to start with. I will take what you will give me, and if I improve you will know what I am

The boy spoke so sensibly and showed such good principles that the gentle-man took him at once. Afterwards he to a the lad's father that he really had the help than he needed but could not f id to let such a boy go. There is great demand now for firstdass workmen everywhere. It is second class that have the hard time. A so real hopesty was never worth so cau trust,' said a merchant. WORTH REMEMBERING

The young lady who goes to school a other of books and a novel will not carry if the pr za. Nor the boy who plays sil the eventog, stays up late and mays bis studies for the morning. Bass and gitle should rise early in order By stid galls should rise early in order to metter prepare their studies. Make the tessons yourself. Do not have others, to make them for you. Learn now that you are young. Boys who wish to possess clear heads should not smoke. possess clear heads should not smoke. Nothing ipjures them more than the pernicious habit of smoking. Never use profane language. Boys should not chew, much less girls. Have a time for everything, as well as a place for every-thing, and put everything in its place. —True Voice.

thing. She is the girl who is at her desk on time if she is one of the great army of working girls. Her employer and friends all know that she will be ready for business or pleasure at the appointed time. The girl's perves are in good order

The girl's perves are in good order because she never has to hurry or worry to catch up some work that has been neglected, at the proper time, and her life runs on smoothly and happily be-cause no undone task or neglected appointment is worrying her, or making her restless. Character is not formed in a minute. The girl has been training herself for years to be punctual. She is ever ready for emergencies, for this habit over ready for emergencies, for this habit of punctuality now touches her life in all its relations, and she is making her influence felt in her own family, at least, influence felt in her to see the wonderful for they must come to see the wonderful advantage of being always ready, always on time. The punctual girl, while she is earnest and womanly, has not lost her girlish charm. Her outlook is encourag-ing, new chances are constantly opening to hav advancement because it is known to her advancement because it is known that she can be relied upon.

Catholics and Candidates

Says the Catholic Columbian : ""Mr. Says the Catholic Columbian: '"Mr. Taft is a Unitarian and does not believe that Christ was God. Mr. Roosevelt is a member of the Dutch Reformed Church, which is a sort of Lutheran denomination. Mr. Wilson is a Presby-terian, which is one of the most in-tolerant of all the sects. Catholics will vote for these men for President of the United States, each one deciding for himself which one of the three he con-scienciously thinks stands on the United States, each one deciding for himself which one of the three he con-scienciously thinks stands on the best official. Catholics will be true to the Constitution which forbids a re-ligious test for public office. Catholics will not consider the religion of these candidates, but will consider only their fitness for office and the principles that they represent. But if a Catholic like Senator O'Gorman, or Chief Justice White, or Governor Burke had been nominated, the Guardians of Bigotry would have uttered shrieks of 'patriot-ism' against his election and would, so far as their influence extended, have made religion the leading" issue of the campaign." And so it is too in Canada

From time to time delicious new ways of serving Kellogg's Corn Flakes are discovered. Here are a few:

Kellogg's with strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, blueberries.

Kellogg's with sliced peaches, pears, or apples.

Kellogg's with sliced oranges, bananas, or pineapple.

Kellogg's in the centre of half a canteloupe.

Kellogg's with ice cream, fruit jellies, custards.

Try Kellogg's with fresh fruits, stewed fruits, or preserves.

Your palate will welcome variety.

47