TYRONE. Peter Conway was hanged in Omagh Jail, County Tyrone, on the morning of April 14, for the murder of James Miller on July 14, 1879. The particulars of the murder are as follows:—Times went hard with the Conways of Pomeroy, father and son, and they struggled against an adverse fate with but poor success. Monetary difficulties beset them thickly. First their miserable few acres were mort-gaged, and then the wretched stock these acres fed. One James Miller, a young man, was the luckless medium of their pecuniary relief, and shortly before July last, between bills of sale and mortgages, the Conways were no more than paypers TYRONE.
