

LES ONES RIGHT TO A HOME.

A great lawyer and philanthropist, the late Charles F. Donnelly, has left a will that even a poor home was made for a child than a good one for a rich man.

And the Most Reverend Archbishop Glennon, of St. Louis, speaking of the rights of the poor, said: "The home, I want to add that it is a right to their home also. Houses, orphan asylums and schools are only places of resort. They never do and they can take the place of the home. Altruistic charity and all the same activity today should be directed to building up and sustaining of the poor, and every means to render these homes habitable."

Fortunately, the tendency today is away from the home—to throw children on the city or on the charity. Divorce courts are the ruin of the juvenile courts. The misery is complete and quite effective. When it gets through there is the ruined home—the east-off wife in the well-filled asylum.

Archbishop Glennon, still with local notions in mind, further asserted in the orphan asylums at least 90 per cent of the children are not saved at all, but the children of the parents, who put the man in the orphanage in the hard work of asking the pennies of the poor to support these little ones.

Those properly responsible are taking their strength and their substance in dissipation. The National Conference of Charities will soon be in St. Louis, and it is evidently those of the Archbishop to have the home, vs. the asylum. Only thrashed out. He reminded us, however, at this preliminary conference that two spectres will come: crime and poverty.

That must be dealt with. At least, thank God, the poor of today are not so poor as the poor of yesterday. The means of teaching and helping are multiplying.

The words of Archbishop Glennon, every great city in the land, are little difference in count. The Republic, Boston.

THE NICKEL.

Fine weather and a fine programme filled the Nickel to overflowing from 7.30 until nearly 10.30 Monday evening. It was a regular crush of patrons, everyone of whom appeared to be satisfied to the fullest degree, with what they heard and saw. The new comer on the bill was Miss Bertha Dudley, a little Miss from Bangor, who pleased her hearers with her sweet soprano voice in the sentimental ditty, "It's Always June, When You're in Love." Miss Dudley, whose stay in St. John will be of two weeks' duration is already assured of appreciation. Mr. Tom Clifford, with his magnificent baritone enthused everybody with a rollicking rendering of the British sailor song, "Three for Jack." His dramatic action of the piece serving to give the number especially fine effect. He was uproariously cheered at each show. The pictures included a Biograph problem story "The Way of the World," the Edison comedy drama of the Klondyke region entitled "Sandy, the Substitute," and a sparkling Italian comedy of the "Foolishness" series under the name of "Foolishness is Betrothed." The orchestra as usual had a new programme.
