People and Favors.

By BUTH CAMERON.

What a tremendously wide difference there is in the way different people feel about doing things for others.

Some people will gladly do things for you if it is perfectly convenient for you.

If there is the slightest obstacle in the way, the slightest inconvenience, they seem to feel that that automatically absolves them from the obligation to do the favor.

She Would Love To Help You—But—

You ask such a person if she will do an errand for you or lend you some article to be used in the church entertainment, or give her mite of time toward some philanthropy, and she says, "Let me see," and then, four times out of five, comes out with some small obstacle. "I'm not sure I know just where that shop is" (she doesn't want to make the effort to understand your directions), or "I'd be glad to lend you the sofa pillows for the play, but how would you ever get them there?" (the woman who contributed that example has a machine of her own), or "Oh, my dear, that's the day I have my shampooist. She doesn't stay all day? No, but I hate to plan too many things for one day."

Other People Can't Bear Not To Grant A Favor.

At the other extreme are people who seem to look upon a request as something one must find a way to do. Instead of regarding an obstacle in the way of performing the favor as a legitimate excuse, they regard it as a problem to be solved.

"Let me see, you want my tea wagon for the play. Of course, you shall have it, but how shall I get it there? Oh, I know, I'll give the boy next door a nickel to take it down in his little express team. Thursday, the twelfth, why, it was Thursday I was planning to have that little tea. Never mind, I can have it Wednesday just as well."

Why Such People Aren't Appreciated.

Agnes Repplier is evidently thinking of people like this when she says: "There are some people who from some delicacy of mental fibre find it exceedingly difficult to be rude; and there are people who, like Charles Lamb, have a curious habit of doing what they do not want to, and what they know is not worth doing, for the sake of giving pleasure to some utterly insignificant acquaintance."

The second class is so small, and the motives governing it so inscrutable, that we are apt to be exasperated by its amiability."

I was glad to run across that bit of philosophy, for I had always wondered why such people never seem to be as much beloved as one would expect.

I have a suspicion that there is another reason for this besides the inscrutability of the motives of this class. We don't like people to be too good. You remember Queen Guinevere was exasperated by King Arthur because he had no "touch of earth."

Too much unselfishness is always a disagreeable accusation to the comfortable selfishness of some people.

Your Boys and Girls.

Be kind at all times to your child and surround him with those who will always be so. The regularity which should be practiced in the nursery has also a good influence on your child. As it learns that it's wants are supplied at a regular time, it soon becomes accustomed to an element of regularity and reliability.

If the child is not indulged whenever it cries, it soon learns the value of self control. Regularity and self control are large factors in forming discipline. All so called breaking of the will should be strictly forbidden. It breeds obstinacy, deception and a nervous condition. All these ailments may have their foundation laid in the first year of life if great care be not exercised to have kind, sympathetic, yet just treatment for this early period.

Nothing, I've about given up trying to cure it.

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Matrimony.

By GEORGE FITCH,

Author of "At Good Old Swash." Matrimony is the United States of Love. It is a union of the settled state, the contented state, the bustling state and the states of rapture, resignation, distraction and many others. Matrimony is also a very peculiar form of arithmetic, in which one and one make one and later on nine or ten. As soon as a young man and a young woman find that one parlor, one chair and one name are quite enough for both of them, they are made one by law and are then privileged to get along on one income for the rest of their lives.

Matrimony is the origin of the home, the hall mark of civilization, and the hope of the census bureau. Without matrimony man is a useless member of boarding houses and woman a lonely antique. But there is such a thing as being too enthusiastic about matrimony. It is very easily carried to excess. To marry two wives without a vacation between is considered worse than to vote twice at the same election. In uncivilized nations, men frequently have half a dozen wives at the same time and support them in luxury. This is called polygamy. Polygamy is a very peculiar form of misplaced bravery.

When a man marries, he wears to love, cherish and protect his wife and to endow her with all his worldly goods. Men are so wicked, however, that a great many of them persistently hold out cigar and lunch money. When a woman marries, she swears to love, honor and obey her husband. However, the word "obey" is being cut out of many ceremonies as a dead letter law which shows that the married state is more careful about dead letter laws than most other states.

Getting married is a serious matter and yet young people tackle the job with the utmost intrepidity. A young man who does not earn enough to keep himself in fuzzy hats will rush boldly and cheerfully into matrimony with a young woman who has never had to wash two consecutive dishes and would stab herself to death with a needle if she tried to darn a sock. Naturally a great many such marriages are failures, but nowadays the motto in matrimony is: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

Matrimony is blessed with children, good home cooking, pleasant home evenings, golden weddings, and is at other times afflicted with green eyes, soggy head and half-trigger tempers. When a selfish person marries, the victim is to be pitied, but when two selfish persons marry each other, great good results. They are not only removed from circulation, but they get what has been coming to them from their youth up.

Coffey the Roscommon

AGAIN PUT AWAY BY THE NINTH ROUND

Police Reserves Called on the Anxious Crowd Into the Ring as the Fight Between the Two Boxers Ended.

New York, Jan. 8.—Coffey, the Roscommon, was knocked out again by Moran in the ninth round.

Threw Up Sponges. Frank Moran, of Pittsburg, second time within a couple of minutes administered such severe blows that pure humanity's sympathy for Coffey's manager, Gibson, Coffey's manager, sponged into the ring as a forfeit. This was in the ninth round. Coffey, however, will be recorded as a technical out, although Coffey, hanging onto the ropes, kept his feet when the contest ended. It was a repetition of the meeting between the pair, who had been knocked out standing on their feet, the difference that Moran's rounds to accomplish his purpose.

The Garden was packed for the first time in its history. Unofficially placed the receipts at $22,000, which is $7,000 more than was the first encounter between the two men. Coffey, with youth, head, reach, weight and skill against the older, went up against a cool, antagonist, who showed that he hit, and against the invincible cap of a former defeat. Coffey is always a nervous beginner, keyed up to the highest tension after the first round, and so fast that he looked almost dead at the end of each of the first rounds.

In facing Moran, the Irishman went in with the full knowledge of the man before him, and was knocked out and was so again if the slightest blow presented itself to land a blow.

Had To Be on Water. In this he suffered in that his usual speed and cleverness robbed him of much of the fight. He displayed in the first round, been coached to be careful of his chances, but with his waning strength he disregarded all advice and in with the vain hope of a blow which would reverse the decision.

Moran, with one victory already to his credit, tactfully in a smiling, confident manner, had a fighting brain, not a splendid physical outfit. He measured his own ability, and spent it slowly and for his chance to win. In the ninth round, a successful blow on the body and jaw, he derided the former motorist, and helpless. Three times he fell on the floor, and on each occasion, he almost impossible to get up. He was on his feet for a few seconds. Moran's glove reached Coffey's right jaw time the latter assumed a position, and then, with a single, ped, energy spent and spent by the Roscommon pugilist. Moran, clutching the ropes to support his enfeebled body, his manager, fully ended the contest. It was to all present that he was in condition to continue the bout, had put forth his best efforts, though for a time, and though he might perhaps win the fight, he was not match for his opponent, whose plied the left hand impression ever came into contact with Coffey's.

Was Fast Fight. It was a fast fight on the whole, though at certain stages in the rounds it lacked the action which spectators had been led to expect by the widest stretch of imagination could be classed as a scientific exhibition, as the art of hit and get practiced by the clever men was ways missing. Stiff punching was in plenty. Solid wall-punches, carried plenty of steam behind them, but as a boxing exhibition, it was below that to be expected from the weight possibilities. Coffey, who had been in the majority of the rounds until the latter took away his strength and speed with drives into the ring and then beat him down with cringing rights on the jaw. When this happened Moran had been taking a beating for nearly nine rounds. He was shaken and battered from the effects of the pounding.

The first two rounds of the contest were evenly contested. Coffey, who little steam in his punches, appeared to wait for openings which he met Coffey's rushes with head blows. Coffey appeared to gain a little confidence at the end of the second round, and was lucky to escape a finishing blow which grazed his margin, and landed several on the jaw and uppercut which, however, did not appear to worry the Roscommon boxer in the least. Moran showed ability to assimilate punishment in the fourth round and held his own against Coffey. The latter hurt Moran in the fifth round with a number of hard smashes. At this stage of the contest he was using better judgment, and appeared to be tiring under his own efforts.

Began to Slow Up. There was perceptible slowing up in the sixth round.
