MAKING THE NEWSPAPER REAL.

RUTH CAMERON

Do you ever visualize news items? That is, does it ever come over you that these people you read about in the paper aren't just names, just printer's ink, but real flesh and blood folks that are feeling and living these experiences somewhere or other? And do you ever visualize their reactions and their emotions, and thus make for yourself a little drama out of the printed page?

It has long been my habit to do this, partly perhaps because I was once behind the scenes in the great business of making a newspaper and so had it brought home to me that these names were real folks.

The Thing That Hit Me Hardest.

Let me give you an example of what I mean. The other day as I read in the paper the story of the first leg of the airplane voyage across the ocean I came to this paragraph:

"The NC 3 soared swiftly toward the city and planed down with roaring engines. As it struck the water a great cloud of iridescent spray shot up. Still proceeding at tremendous speed it rushed toward its moorings leaving great furrows of foam in its wake. Here a fishing smack crossed the course necessitating a detour but the NC 3 picked up its moorings off the former American naval air station."

Can't You Hear Those Fishermen Telling Their Tale.

Now of course the whole thing is wonderfully dramatic but you will be surprised when I tell you what hit me the hardest. The line—"A fishing smack." I could just picture the importance of the men, how they went home and told how they were nearly run down by the wonderful new invention and how quick they had to act to get out of the way. I even projected myself into the future and imagined them telling to their grandchildren in the days when over ocean flights will have become a commonplace, their tale of the first ocean flight and their part in it.

What a Dramatic Moment It Must Have Been.

Here is another example. The morning after America entered the war, I read that a certain big life insurance company had held a council and decided that they would not ask any extra premium from the men insured in their companies who went to war but would give full benefits. Can't you visualize the drama, in that? Can't you see the head men of that company gathered about a big mahogany table. Can't you see the head accountant presenting his figures to show if the thing could be done? Can't you imagine the battle between the men who were against it and those who were for it? Can't you hear the argument that it would be a splendid advertisement being advanced and don't you hope you can hear at least a word or two of idealism, and share with those men some thrill of fine excitement when the big decision is made? That is what that announcement meant to me.

I once heard of a woman who slipped the newspaper reports of all cases of attempted suicide that occurred in her city and wrote to the people involved and tried to find out their trouble and do what she could to help. Wasn't that a beautiful way of visualizing the news?

The Honey-moon Up-to-date.

A housemaid who had been a long time in her situation recently gave notice because she was going to have "the banns put up."

Her month had almost elapsed when the girl who was engaged to take her place wrote to say that she would be unable to commence her duties until a fortnight after the date her predecessor had arranged to be married.

The maid was asked by her mistress whether she would agree to postpone the ceremony, and stay on that length of time.

"Change the date, change your fate, ma'am," answered the girl. "It's like flying in the face of Providence to alter wedding arrangements; but if 'Erbert is agreeable, I don't mind getting married and then come back here for a fortnight."

The young man offered no objection, and half an hour after the ceremony the bride was busy at her usual duties.

"And has your husband gone back to work too, Mary?" asked her mistress.

"Oh, no, ma'am!" answered Mary, proudly. "'Erbert's gone to 'Astings for 'is 'oneymoon."

I THOUGHT IT WAS TROUBLE.

I thought it was trouble, it looked disaster, The heart in my breast, beating faster and faster Excited my blood till it throbbed in my veins And sometimes kept saying: "Look out! when it rains! Look out when it blows! For nobody knows Where your fond hopes will be when the whirlwind goes by. It will scatter And shatter The fortune you've made in the wink of an eye."

I thought it was trouble, I fretted and stood still in despair, and then wildly I hurried, Ran this way and that, and talked loudly as though I could keep back the wind that was starting to blow. Then all that I'd feared From the distance appeared The storm came and went and it wasn't so bad. It whistled and tossed me But nothing it cost me. And now I can laugh at the scare that I had.

I thought it was trouble. It was for a minute, I was heartick and sore all the time I was in. But I've learned that the cares and the burdens we borrow Are things that we sit back and laugh at to-morrow. So stand to the blow. And the oncoming woe And wait till you're hurt ere you whisper and cry. Just see the thing through. Soon the skies will be blue And you'll laugh at yourself when the storm has gone by.

Hatless Women Next.

Fair Sex's Very Latest Craze.

Are women going without hats in the near future? Already it is a craze which is rapidly increasing. Of course, in many theatres for a long time it has been compulsory for ladies to remove their hats, and because of that many go to the theatre wearing only a net over their heads.

Lady Rhonda, Miss Mary McArthur and Miss Susan Lawrence, among famous women speakers, have joined the no-hat brigade when speaking on public platforms. In many of the law courts women witnesses now give their evidence hatless, while at picture palaces, at race courses, and at other places of amusement, both indoor and outdoor, more and more women are taking up the new craze and going about hatless.

There's one place, however, where women must wear their hats and that is in church. This is, of course, because of the word of St. Paul, and very few clergymen indeed would let a woman come to church without her head covered.

Nothing Doing There.

Noislessly, but with all his might, the burglar tugged away at the dressing-table drawer.

In vain. It refused to open. He tugged again.

"Give it another jerk," said a voice behind him.

The burglar turned. The owner of the house was sitting up in bed, and looking at him with an expression of the deepest interest on his face.

"Jerk it again. There's a lot of valuable property in that drawer, but we haven't been able to open it since the damp weather began. If you can pull it out I'll give you a handsome royalty on everything that's—"

FULL VALUE DEMANDED.

The sum of 100,000,000,000 marks which Germany must pay the Allies for losses and damages caused in the war is based on the pre-war value of the gold mark, which was about 23.25 cents. The latest quoted valuation of the German mark at Amsterdam and at Zurich was about 8½ cents, so that to the Germans this portion of the indemnity means nearly three times the sum demanded.—Toronto Globe.

Vienna Accepts Terms

Berlin Spartacist Activities --- Government Australian Trade Representation

VIENNA, June 5. The first news that the Peace Treaty reduced the frontiers of the mighty empire of Austria came at 10 o'clock last night to Vienna by way of Amsterdam in a news agency despatch and the official text of the treaty. The news arrived this morning. The news filtered through the city but made scarcely any impression on the people. The newspapers to be scarcely commented on the treaty. Editor Benedik of the Neue Presse received the news at his country home shortly after it arrived in Vienna but did not come into the city to write on the subject. The editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, however, wrote an editorial on the treaty and then went to bed at midnight as his custom.

SPARTACISTS AGAIN ACTIVE.

BERLIN, June 5. The political situation brought about by increased Spartacist activity has become more tense since the discovery of the body of Rosa Luxemburg and the manner in which Gustave Noske, the Minister of Defence, ordered it taken to Sossau, twenty-two miles south of Berlin.
