Lola's Secret,

A Romance.

But Dolores knew that in the square's present state of mind the lively and at times half-mad conversation of Lola would be intolerable. There was nothing else to be done but ask the young lady to accompany her while the operation of packing was going on. She would have liked, however, some little time to collect her thoughts. To others it seemed that she was simply going out for an evening's amusement, and that her chief anxiety was her dress; but in reality she was going out knowing that the happiness of her life was at stake, going out in the hope that she would discover whether Sir Karl cared for her. No wonder that she looked grave and thoughtful. She had never yet tried to attract him; but she resolved that she would make the most of her beauty on this evening, and that she would wear her most becoming attire.

The beautiful French girl, with a smile on her lips, lay back in her chair watching her, the very picture of luxurious ease. She was thirsty, and had asked for some fruit. With her white finger-tips she held a lovely ripe peach, talking while she ate it; and Dolores, looking at her, thought she was more like a picture than a girl. "You are looking at me in your mind, Dolores," said your dresses," observed Lola. "I can see the perplexity in your face. Let me decide."

But Dolores was on her guard, and made no answer. She was more silent than usual all the way to Beaulieu. Lola laughed, and told her some absurd anecdotes of the Parisian visitors; but on the sweet face of Dolores there was a look of anxious thought. What would the evening bring for her? When they reached the hall, Dolores, after exchanging greetings with Madame de Ferras, went straight to her room, and Lola went to dress also. On that evening Miss de Ferras wore a dress of white and gold, with gold ornaments, and her favorite flowers, red roses, in her hair. She had never looked more brilliant, more beautiful, or more animated. Yet, when the two girls stood together, it was almost impossible to judge between them. Dolores, with the graceful silken folds of her dress falling around her, her golden hair and flower-like face, was perhaps more bewitching in her way. Lola was dazzling; she reminded one of a rich tropical flower. Dolores was the type of a sweet English girl, fresh and pure as a lily. No one thought either of innocence or simplicity when looking at Lola.

Dolores had vowed to herself that she would not be shy, cold or proud to Sir Karl, that she would give him every opportunity of speaking to her, and that she would be as amiable as possible to him. Yet when the first sound of his voice came to her, she grew faint and sick at heart; she seemed to realize all at once the great stake she was to win or lose that night.

He did not come straight to her. Lola had gone forward to meet him, and kept him for some minutes in conversation about the French guests. "You must talk to Madame Glensie," she said. "She was a great favorite with the Empress, and knows more about the French court than any other. She was a devoted imperialist," continued Lola. "She would give her last shilling to the cause. When you have heard her speak of the Empress you will be compelled to love her."

"Be explicit, Miss de Ferras. Love whom? Madame Glensie or the Empress?"

"The Empress, of course! You know that I love her. Her life always reminds me of a tragic poem. I think she is the most beautiful, the most charming woman who ever graced a throne, and if you wish to please me," she paused and looked at him archly, "that is, if you really wish to please me—"

"Can you doubt it?" he said, with laughing gallantry.

"I do not want to doubt; I wish to believe it," she answered. "So, if you desire to please me, you will talk to Madame Glensie and learn to love the Empress, Sir Karl."

"Have you any other commands?" he asked, with a low bow. "I will tell you as the evening goes on," she replied, and her dark eyes seemed to flash light into his.

He said to himself that to look at the fair angelic beauty of Dolores after a flash from those dark eyes was like changing the sunny beams of a hot noonday sun for clear calm moonlight. Unfortunately he put his thoughts into words.

"How beautiful Miss Clifden looks tonight! What a poetical face she has," he said.

The remark gave Lola the very opening she wanted. "Yes, she looks more like a white rose than ever. But, do you know, Sir Karl, I have more than a suspicion that the white rose is won already."

"Was it the changing light of the chandelier, or did his face really grow pale as she spoke?" she could not tell. "Yes," she continued, "the wars of the roses—so far as Dolores and I are concerned—are, I believe, ended."

"You speak in riddles, Miss de Ferras," he said, "and I detest riddles. What do you mean?" "There was some little emotion in his voice."

"You must promise me not to tell," she replied. "I have perhaps no right to speak, and mind, Miss Clifden herself has not told me, but I know—I am sure—I—"

"You know that I shall respect your confidence," he said. "Why should I not?"

"I believe," she went on, "and I have every reason for my belief, that there is some understanding or promise between Lord Rhymer and Dolores Clifden."

"Lord Rhymer?" he cried, in horror. "Why, he is old enough to be her father!"

"Better to be an old man's darling than a young man's slave," she quoted.

But he did not heed her. He was muttering something under his mustache—words of anger and annoyance, which pierced her to the heart. Why should he care? What could it possibly matter to him?

"I wish you would speak a little more plainly," he said, impatiently. "Do you mean that they are engaged?"

"I must not say so in so many words," she replied; "but I believe such to be the case."

Sir Karl felt that he had lost the only treasure he held dear to him, for a sudden conviction had come to him that he loved Dolores Clifden as he should never love anyone else in the world.

It was with something like wonder that Lola watched the handsome face of her companion. There could be no mistake as to the agitation and annoyance expressed there. She asked herself if she had been blinded, mistaking, mistaking? Was it possible that he cared for Dolores after all?

"Are you quite sure of what you say, Miss de Ferras?" he asked presently.

"Quite sure," she replied; "and an excellent match it will be. I remember now when I remember that on my return from Germany I considered Lord Rhymer the most eligible part in the country."

"Do you not now?" he asked, trying to speak earnestly. She looked him full in the face as she answered, her eyes flashing—

"No, most decidedly I do not!" He was flattered by the implication. He knew that she referred to him, but he could not rouse himself sufficiently to talk to her. After a few more words, he made some excuse for leaving her. He was angry and annoyed, though he had no reason for feeling so. He considered himself injured in some fashion, although he could hardly have told how.

"She need not surely have been in such a hurry," he said to himself; "she is still very young. How can she marry a man of more than double her age? It is impossible that she can love him; she must be marrying him for his money. It is shameful for a young girl to be so mercenary. I am disappointed in her."

LOTS OF WHALES.
San Francisco, Oct. 10.—The Pacific Steam Whaling Company's Balena has returned from the Arctic with 47,000 pounds of whalebone and 180 barrels of oil, all valued at $200,000.

CASH SAVED THEM.
Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 10.—The run on the Grand Haven National Bank, continued yesterday, and Cashier Wylie, of the National City Bank here, went there on a special train with cash said to aggregate $225,000 to meet all demands. The display of cash from Grand Rapids was so effective that Wylie returned with every cent of the money taken and confidence had been restored.

The fall term of the circuit court in Kansas City, Mo., opened with 200 suits for divorce on the docket.

Women Dread
The disfigurement caused by skin disease, even more than the tormenting irritation which is so commonly associated with it. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery results in a complete cure of eczema, pimples, eruptions and other forms of disease which have their cause in an impure condition of the blood.

"Golden Medical Discovery" absolutely purges the blood of humors and poisons, and so cures the cutaneous diseases which bad blood breeds and feeds. There is no alcohol in the "Golden Medical Discovery" and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"I was troubled with eczema from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet," writes Mrs. Ella Quick, of Cass City, Mo., Mich. "Could not walk at times, nor wear my shoes. Thought there was no help for me—least the doctor said there was none. I went to see friends at Christmas time and there heard of the good that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery had done for them and was advised to try it at once. For fear that I might neglect it my friends sent to the village and got a bottle and made me promise that I would take it. I had been getting worse all the time. I took thirteen bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and was cured. It was slow, but sure. I was taking the medicine for eight months. I would say to all who read this: Try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery before wasting time and money."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets assist the action of the "Discovery."

GOOD CROPS IN HUNGRY INDIA

Viceroy Reports Their General Condition Excellent.

Chamberlain Sums Up Britain's Foreign Policy.

Beresford's Brilliant Strategy—Dead Marquis of Bute Belonged to the Stuarts—The British Elections.

CROPS IN INDIA.

London, Oct. 10.—Lord George Hamilton, secretary of state for India, has received the following dispatch from the viceroy of India, Lord Curzon of Kedleston: "The general condition of the crops is excellent, and, except in a part of Bombay, famine conditions are disappearing. The total number on the relief list has fallen to 2,745,000."

GREEK CURRENT CROP FAILS.
London, Oct. 10.—The report that the Greek current crop is an entire failure is confirmed. One dealer says that instead of 25,000 tons it will not amount to 40,000. He adds that the Christmas market here alone usually requires 50,000 tons. There is no reserve from last season's crop, and the present price is $30 a hundredweight.

BRITAIN'S FOREIGN POLICY.
London, Oct. 10.—Mr. Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, speaking at Stourbridge, said: "Great Britain's foreign policy, as I sum it up, is to remain on friendly terms with every great country in Europe, and on something more than friendly terms with the United States."

Mr. Chamberlain ridiculed the attempt of the opposition leaders to hold him up as a bogey to foreign nations. "Great Britain's foreign policy," he exclaimed, "is in the hands of Lord Salisbury, and I have not the presumption to meddle with it."

BRILLIANT STRATEGY.
London, Oct. 10.—Lord Charles Beresford has amazed the naval world by the brilliant strategy with which he won the sham battle in the recent maneuvers of the British fleet in the Mediterranean. His tactics have been pronounced the cleverest in naval annals. The fleet was divided into parts, Beresford in command of one and Admiral Fisher of the other.

Beresford was blocked in the ports of Mitylene by Fisher's torpedo boats, and Fisher's fleet was hovering about and lying in wait outside. Beresford's task was to coal his fleet, get out of the harbor, and attack Fisher.

By cutting lights on launches to make them resemble ships in the darkness, Beresford deceived the torpedo boats away on a false trail, and with every light out on his own warships, he slipped out to sea with not a vessel touched. Having done this he misled Fisher's scouts by false signals and caught the hostile fleet entirely unprepared off the island of Lemnos. Fisher's squadron ran his guns parallel to the columns, and Beresford maneuvered his ships so skillfully that the admiral had no opportunity to change his formation or to do anything but clear decks for instant action. Beresford ran his ships in single file right in between the lines, enabling him to fight with both broadsides, while each of Fisher's vessels could use but one. The victory was so complete and overwhelming that the umpires awarded it on the spot to the dashing hero of the Alexandria bombardment, who ran the Egyptian fort and battered it to atoms at close range.

BRITISH ELECTIONS.
London, Wednesday, Oct. 10.—3 a.m.—From the returns received at midnight, it appears that the government gained two seats in yesterday's polling in the parliamentary general election. These are the Midland division of Southampton, Lancashire, where Mr. E. D. Fielden defeated Mr. J. Duckworth, Liberal, who represented the constituency in the late parliament, and Monmouth, where Dr. Rutherford Harris, who now sits in the House of Commons, defeated Mr. J. E. D. Fielden.

NOTEWORTHY RESULTS.
Among the other noteworthy elections was that of Mr. Wm. St. John Brodick, under secretary of state for foreign affairs in the Guildford division of Surrey, with a majority of 2,207 over his Liberal opponent, Mr. A. W. Chapman, and that of Sir John Edward Fisher, Liberal, in the Rushcliffe division of Nottinghamshire. Mr. Fisher has represented Rushcliffe since 1885. The Ministerialists, in fighting him, made effective use of his pro-Boer letters, recently published by Mr. Chamberlain, and the majority he secured at the general election of 1895 was reduced by about 187 votes.

The Liberals are holding their own in Yorkshire, and in some districts their candidates have doubled their majorities of the previous general election.

522 MEMBERS ELECTED.
Five hundred and twenty-two new members have been officially declared elected of whom 387 are Ministerialists and 135 belong to the Opposition. The Ministerialists have gained five seats more than their opponents.

Considerable adverse comment, conservative as well as Liberal, has been caused by the declaration attributed to Mr. Chamberlain in a recent speech, "A seat lost to the government is a seat sold to the Boers."

Mr. Chamberlain writes to the Daily Mail this morning, repudiating the statement, and explaining what he really said was a quotation from the mayor of Mafeking. "A seat lost by the government is a seat gained by the Boers."

The Daily Mail commenting editorially upon Mr. Chamberlain's communication, still insists that

HE WENT TOO FAR.
In view of the fact that quite a large number of Liberals have consistently supported the government's South African policy. The paper also declares that Mr. Chamberlain's tactics will not assist him in his struggle for the premiership, and will arouse uneasiness as to the qualifications for the foreign office.

Mr. John Morley has been re-elected for Monmouth-Burghe in the Liberal interest, receiving 3,950 votes, as against 2,300 cast for Mr. J. B. Don, his Liberal-Unionist opponent.

OF ROYAL BLOOD.
John Patrick Crichton-Stuart, marquis of Bute, who died yesterday at his London residence, was the third marquis for the title was only created in 1792. Nevertheless the family is one of the oldest in the country, for it descended from John Stuart, son of King Robert II. of Scotland, who, in 1285, conferred on the family the office of hereditary sheriff of Bute, Arran and Cumbrae. In 1527 James was created baronet of Nova Scotia, and in 1702 the title of Earl of Bute was conferred on the family. The first earl was a member of Anne's privy council and was one of the commissioners appointed to treat for a union between England and Scotland.

The late marquis was lord rector of St. Andrew's University from 1892 to 1898, and was mayor of Cardiff in 1890-91. The estates amount to about 120,000 acres.

THE OCEANIC'S CLOSE CALL.
New York, Oct. 10.—The Evening world has a copyrighted dispatch from Quebec, saying: "The giant White Star liner Oceanic, which arrived here today had a narrow escape from shipwreck off the coast of Ireland. While approaching the coast at 4 a.m., and trying to pick up the Fastnet Light, the liner was suddenly seen crashing on the rocks ahead, and the vessel touched bottom. Capt. Cameron immediately reversed his engines; the watertight compartments were closed; the lifeboats were cleared away and the crew were at quarters at once. The big ship got back into deep water without being injured. There was no panic."

BUBONIC PLAGUE IN BOMBAY.
London, Oct. 10.—"Bubonic plague," says a dispatch to the Daily Express from Bombay, "is becoming epidemic in many districts of the Bombay presidency. Alarming increases are reported from Poona and Belgaum, while the coast ports are infested. Cotton crops have withered in Ahmednagar and Bijapur districts in consequence of the drought."
