THE LAURIER GOVERNMENT AND THE MANUFACTURERS.

A member of the Saskatchewan Government, Hon. George Langley, tells a meeting of Liberals at Calgary that the Laurier Government trucked too much to the manufacturing interests.

This is undeniably the opinion of many western Liberals. Western Conservatives traded on it astutely in the last election. In the rural ridings of the western provinces the reciprocity agreement was attacked by them, on the ground that it maintained practically intact the privileges of the eastern manufacturers. A deeper cut in the duty on agricultural implements in particular would have been a highly popular stroke. Duty-free implements had been advocated in the House by Mr. Meighen, of Portage la Prairie, the present solicitor-general, and by nearly every Conservative member between Lake Superior and the Rockies. Only the very obvious advantages of a free American market reconciled western grain-growers to the industrial clauses of the reciprocity agreement. Liberal candidates were pictured by their opponents as the defenders of the implement trust, the cement trust, and the other trusts that were putting up their money to defeat the Laurier Government.

In Eastern Canada a very different set of tactics was adopted by the anti-reciprocity strategists. They accused the Government of betraying the manufacturing interests of the country, and cried that the whole fabric of Canadian industry would collapse as a result of duty-free pork and potatoes. Many manufacturers joined in this chorus, some from partisan motives, others because they were galled. Canadian workmen were also grossly deceived as to the true nature of the proposed legislation. From anti-reciprocity journals they could not learn that the agreement virtually limited the reduction or abolition of duties to foodstuffs. They were given to understand it exposed all industries to the full sweep of American competition, and they were warned by these journals and by some unscrupulous employers that their livelihood was at stake.

Western Liberals must make allowance for the difficulties of the Government in the last campaign. The Government at least redeemed its promise and was true to Liberal principles by seeking to give Canadian producers the benefit of wider markets. In so doing it knew it challenged the jingoes and the organized selfishness which dictates the policy of the present administration. It was careful of the manufacturing interests, and did succeed in rallying some enlightened captains of industry to a policy which offered the farmers some compensation for the burdens put upon them by the tariff; but it could scarcely have fared worse if it had tried to throw down the whole tariff wall.

LORD LOREBURN'S PROPOSAL.

Lord Loreburn's proposal of a conference of all parties to try to find a mutually satisfactory settlement of the home rule question, derived importance only from the importance of the proposer himself. As a distinguished Liberal, a former Lord Chancellor, his letter was naturally hailed with pleasure by Unionists as supporting their contention that the present home rule bill is unworkable. But the response from Liberal, Unionist, and Nationalist leaders and newspapers holds out no hope of practical results. The Liberals and Nationalists insist, with justice, that the Unionists must accept the principle of home rule as the basis of any conference. Earl Grey, Lord Dunsraven and other moderate Unionists are prepared to assent to some form of devolution or federalism, which they have publicly advocated, but the Ulster wing of the party will listen to no such concession. Mr. Law, Lord Lansdowne and the recognized Unionist leaders will not and perhaps cannot overrule Sir Edward Carson. When Lord Lansdowne pledged himself to support the home rule bill if it were endorsed by the country he was at once reminded of Sir Edward's dictatorship, and speedily repented his rashness.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 15.—Through the capsizing of a canoe upon the line of the Algoma Central railway yesterday, John Marcott, aged 18, of Sudbury, lost his life, while a companion was able to reach shore in an exhausted condition. The pair had come fishing on Lake Mitchell, and in the excitement in making a catch stood up, with disastrous results. Marcott was an employee of the Lake Superior Paper Company.

he showed during the attack upon the veto power of the House of Lords and the passage of the Parliament bill.

Apparently no other course is open to the Government, but to push the home rule bill to a third reading next May or June, and advise the King to sign it. If the Government is sustained at the ensuing election it must seek to give effect to its own legislation and take the consequences. If the Unionist party succeeds, it must take the consequences of destroying the bill, and dashing the golden chalice from the lips of Erin.

NOT THE RIGHT PREFERENCE.

The head of a large shipbuilding concern in Toronto protests against a new ruling of the Federal Government that all vessels built for the Government must be composed wholly of British or Canadian materials. He says that most of the steel plates used in constructing Canadian ships are obtained from Pittsburgh and Chicago, mainly on account of quicker delivery. If this heavy freight had to be transported in every case 3,000 miles from Great Britain, Canadian shipbuilders could not turn out ships as speedily or cheaply as though they had every country in the world to draw on. They would be handicapped accordingly in competition with the world.

No doubt these are the views of other Canadian shipbuilders. They find that this measure of protection for British and Canadian steel makers is an added burden on their own industry, but protection necessarily works out in this way. The new regulation is an inverted application of the British preference. The original preference carried with it only a diminution of taxes. The price of no manufacturer's raw material was raised by it; in many instances there was a marked decrease. The new ruling has the contrary effect.

The British preference served the country well in the hands of its authors. The present Government is abusing it.

STRONG PLEA FOR AID IN SPREADING BIBLE

Secretary of Bible Society Asks London Sunday Schools to Help.

Rev. W. E. Hassard, of Toronto, secretary of the Bible Society, occupied the pulpit of Dundas Centre Methodist Church Sunday evening and presented the work of the organization he represents, in an interesting and instructive address.

Mr. Hassard made a strong plea for further aid from the Sunday schools in London for this work. The importance of the Bible Society was only being realized among the different churches at the present time, and the splendid progress had been made in this city toward its support. However, London had still much to do in this respect, and an effort was being made this year to raise $5,000 among the churches of London to go to Bible Society work.

Translating Testament. The work of this society in foreign lands was described by Mr. Hassard, and many incidents and experiences that befell the collectors were related. The translation of the testament into different languages was described as a most interesting but laborious work, especially in India, where there were so many different languages.

The work in Canada, however, was just as important as that in foreign lands, and Mr. Hassard described it fully. At Quebec thousands of forty, they are always agreeably surprised when presented with a Bible printed in their own language. This has led to many conversions. The Bible Society is doing much toward the solving of Canada's foreign problem, but greater enthusiasm on the part of the Canadian people and Canadian churches is needed to meet its growing demands. Rev. Mr. Hassard spoke in St. Andrew's Church in the morning along the same lines.

Chalmers Church Held Rally Day

First in City to Observe Plan Arranged by General Assembly.

The Sunday school of Chalmers Church, Waterloo street, was the first of the Presbyterian schools in the city to observe the new "Rally Day" arranged by the general assembly's committee. The morning service Sunday being devoted to this end. The church was prettily and profusely decorated with flowers, and there was a good attendance of Sunday school officers and scholars. The assembly's order of service was followed. Rev. Frank C. Harper, B.A., B.D., the minister, presided. He referred to the subject "God's Helpers," referring to the thoughts on power, readiness, duty, truthfulness and decision illustrated by David's conflict with Goliath.

Sunday evening was devoted to one of those popular services that have been given at Chalmers church during the last two years. The sermon was on the 9th Chapter of Revelation, and the mythical legends were woven into the light of uncorrupted passions. Their crowns of gold were like the stage crowns, made of paper and gilt, and the devil is the greatest stage-artist the world has known. His crowns of pastboard owe their glamour to the false lights that the diseased imagination casts, and the glory of every kingdom that he promises to his slave is the counterfeit glow of瓦斯.

Victims of the devil's guile in gaining the pastboard crown were instanced by the politician who sought for and used power for selfish ends alone, and missed the real glory of humanity's advancement, the worldly person who used church membership for gaining social position, and church attendance for commercial advertisement, and the youth who seeks pleasure rather than duty, and grows in character's undying satisfactions. When Christ said, "I am the truth," He also offered to His follower the pure gold crown of righteousness. He only gains that crown who fights a good fight, and keeps the faith.

East Side Mourns Big Tim Sullivan

New York, Sept. 15.—"Big Tim" Sullivan passed through the streets of the East Side for the last time today.

His body was taken this morning to the old cathedral of St. Patrick, a short quarter of a mile from the rooms of the association bearing his name, where it had lain in state since Saturday afternoon.

Tens of thousands of men and women from every part of New York had gazed on his features there and a throng, such as only the East Side can furnish, followed it today to the cathedral and to its last resting place in Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn.

A delegation of congressmen led the mourners. Behind this delegation marched the longest funeral train the East Side has ever seen. The streets sombre with crepe draped on the shop windows.

Stream of Blood Revealed Murder

[Canadian Press.]

New York, Sept. 15.—A thick red stream trickling down the front of a tenement house in Brooklyn today revealed the murder of Mrs. Giulio De-cattani. Two sailors, who first noticed the red stain, looked up and saw the woman at the window trying to scream, but unable to make a sound because her husband had severed her windpipe. The woman bled to death in a few minutes. The husband said he killed her because she refused to return with him to Italy. He made no attempt to escape.

GIRL WAS ROBBED ON WAY TO MOTHER'S FUNERAL

Toronto Highwayman Got $630 From Miss May Love Near Station.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Miss May Love, of Winnipeg, on her way home to Madoc to attend her mother's funeral, was attacked at the corner of Yonge and Front streets, about 9 o'clock last evening, by a highwayman, who hit her over the head and then while she was senseless grabbed her chateleine bag containing $30 in cash, her railway ticket and $600 in checks.

Miss Love was a stranger in the city, and not being familiar with the location of the Union Station, she stopped to inquire of a middle-aged woman, who, after directing her, turned and walked in the opposite direction.

Two Men Passed. It was then that she noticed two men as they walked past her, one of whom caused her to become suspicious. Recognizing the fact that the street was brilliantly lit, she thought herself safe and proceeded towards Bay street. No sooner had she passed the bank than one of the men walked across the street while the other walked slowly back towards Yonge street.

As he passed her, he made an unsuccessful attempt to grab her chateleine. Failing in the attempt, he grabbed her around the neck.

In a Bad Fix. Miss Love dropped her suitcase which she was carrying but still retained a tight hold upon her chateleine. Unable to wrench the chateleine from her, the highwayman struck her a stunning blow on the back of the head, which rendered her senseless for a few seconds. Regaining her feet, she again called for help and started to chase the men.

A motorman on a passing car rushed to her assistance and also a woman, who pleaded with her not to follow the thief, who had sought refuge behind the advertising boards in the fire ruins on the south side of the street.

The meantime Policemen Smith and Ellwood appeared on the scene and made a hurried search of the vicinity of the customs house, and the box cars, but without success.

COUSIN OF MAYOR GAYNOR FOUND DEAD IN TORONTO

Alleged That He and Son Had Quarrelled Over Money Matters.

Toronto, Sept. 14.—Following, it is said, an altercation with his son George on Saturday evening, James Gaynor, aged 67, of 237 Mutual street, second cousin of the late Mayor Gaynor, of New York city, was found dead on the floor of his home. The body was taken prior to his death into custody and was morgue on the instructions of the chief coroner, who considered that the circumstances surrounding the man's death demanded investigation.

Mr. Gaynor was a contractor and had often been assisted in his contracts by his son. Several months ago he contracted for the erection of a house in Rosedale, and intimate friends of the family say he was obliged to accept assistance from his son so he completed the house. Neighbors say that the son had frequent disputes over this matter.

Mr. Gaynor had not been in good health for some time, and suffered from heart trouble due to a paralytic stroke. Saturday evening, it is said, the son went to his home, and the arguments over the contract were renewed. The housekeeper, Mrs. Wheeler, left the place a few minutes later the son called for assistance. His father was lying on the floor of the parlor unconscious. Neighbors went to the house, and when they could arouse the man they summoned a doctor, but the man was past medical assistance.

SOLD BY ALL LEADING STATIONERS IN THE CITY AND THROUGHOUT THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO.

Street Baptist Church has been staked out, and a permit for its construction will likely be taken out tomorrow. The temporary buildings at the fair grounds, aggregating $18,000, will also come in this week, it is expected.

One of two of the acts were worth seeing; the others are more than excellent in some or nickel shows.

I don't think that this exhibition exhibited a little real showmanship and gave the people something for their money. The exhibitors certainly do their share, but the credit is due them. If the attractions were of as high an order there would be no criticism.

We all hope the fair will continue to prosper and that it will continue to improve, and we would like to see something a little different by the time next year rolls around.

Why not have some cement walks and benches in the park?

I do not want to injure the fair in any way, and I think citizens should give the board their co-operation in improving it. Yours very truly,

LONDON, SEPT. 15, 1913.
