IMPERIAL TELEGRAPHY.

A conference was held in one of the committee rooms of the Imperial House of Commons recently to discuss the cheapening of telegraph rates between Great Britain and her colonies. The discussion was purely informal and Mr. Henniker Heaton seems to have had most to say. He drew attention to the fact that the rate per word between Great Britain and Vancouver is 1s 6d a word, whereas the rate to India, the distance being much shorter, is 4s. He urged the establishment of a land line to India for the purpose of cheapening rates. He pointed out that there is a land line to Merv, and that if a line were extended by land to India through Afghanistan, it would be possible to send messages to India for 51/2d a word. It would also be possible, he said, to link up land lines, so that only 850 miles of cable would be necessary for the Australian connection. Last year about $2,409,000 was paid out for telegrams between England and Australia, and he thought this could be reduced 75 per cent, by the utilization of land lines in the manner proposed.

Mr. Arnold-Forster and Sir Fortescue Flannery pointed out that the establishservice, which would be very undesirable for strategic reasons, and Sir Lepel Griffin urged that as a great naval power Great Britain must lay the greatest stress on sea lines.
