—The London Daily Chronicle draws an interesting parallel between the history of Aristide Briand, recently Premier of France, and David Lloyd-George, the British Chancellor.

Both were born in humble circumstances so far as wealth and worldly position are concerned. Both found that there is no royal road to learning.
Their paths to a good education were beset by many difficulties which have deterred many less eager seekers. Both, however, won their way to the honorable profession of the law. Both had naturally the faculty of facile and convincing speech, and availed themselves of all opportunities possible of listening to men who possessed the gift of oratory.
Both were influenced by the circumstances of their lives to think much of social questions and to incline in many matters to the side of the masses. Both were, early in their professional career, chosen for Parliamentary responsibilities, and having placed their feet upon the first round of the Parliamentary ladder, they soon began to rise by the sheer force of manifest ability. Both are the recognized and trusted friends of their official superiors. Both are the hope of all in their respective countries who are laboring for the universal acceptance of the fact, that "The rank is but the guinea's stamp, The man's the gold, for a' that."

Both are yet comparatively young men, and the story of their successes should be an incentive to all.

To those who are able to look out from the standpoint of fifty years ago; the opportunities of the young people of the present day are wonderful. Poverty is not an insuperable barrier to anyone who desires a good educational equipment for the battle of life. And all young people should cherish the commendable ambition to take advantage of these opportunities, not for merely selfish uses, but in order to be the best fitted for usefulness and success in whatever path of life may be opened up before them.

—The Welsh friends of David Lloyd-George recently presented him with his portrait. The speaker who formally unveiled the portrait said facetiously that for some weeks the question had been occupying the attention of the subscribers, "Where shall we hang Lloyd-George?"

The question led to several remarks on the same line. One said he had heard a story about some occasion which had drawn together a large crowd in London streets, whereupon another replied "that is nothing to the crowd you would see if they were hanging Lloyd-George." Another told of a man who had rescued some one from drowning. The saved man was called upon to express his obligations to his rescuer, when the latter responded, that he had really done nothing to merit congratulation or reward. He saw the man struggling in the water, and as no one else was near, he saw the man would be drowned unless he saved him. Therefore, he jumped in, swam out to the man, turned his face over to see that he was not Lloyd-George, and then pulled him out.

The little Welsh lawyer fills a large space in the thoughts of Englishmen the world over, at the present time, some savouring, but, most approvingly.

—Extract from the Report of the Secretary of Industry and Immigration, of Nova Scotia, to the Provincial Legislature now in Session.

ATTRACTED BY HOME-LIKE CONDITIONS.
A man who came to Nova Scotia after living some years in the West, writes the following: "Twenty-three years ago I landed from Great Britain at Quebec, where numbers of my fellow countrymen even now think is the beginning of Canada, with Victoria or Vancouver as the other end. I went West, residing in the Canadian North-West twelve years. In 1904 I came East to the Maritime Provinces on a business trip, and was so struck with the attractiveness, home-like conditions, educational and other advantages that I determined to stay here and take up farming. This I did until last year, when my health obliged me to take up some lighter occupation for a while at least, but I may say that I am still owner of a small farm of seventy acres, hiring some of the work done, whilst the family enjoy looking after the poultry, garden and the small dairy."

"For the Old Country tenant farmer, working on a small scale, there is no better country than Nova Scotia with its fertile farm lands. For the cost of a year or two's rent he can become the owner of a comfortable farm house with the knowledge that every cent spent, and all work done will alone benefit himself. The conditions are much more like the home-land—orchards, plenty of wood, a healthy climate, no winter and summer extremes, etc.
We have good markets, which are steadily improving owing to the industrial development in the Province. Now that all the best homesteads are taken up in the West it is folly not to at least give Nova Scotia a trial. Hundreds of farms are to be obtained here at prices that the buildings alone would cost to erect in the West. Intending emigrants should have at least $2,000, although an Englishman of my acquaintance who came to Nova Scotia some years ago invested the only $100 he had in six acres of land. He worked out and paid the balance. Then without a cent and with borrowed money he bought the adjoining farm, which he and his sons soon paid for. Today he is in comfortable circumstances. Others have made good in the same way. Nowhere in Nova Scotia are men out of work.
Conditions all over the Maritime Provinces are good. As our industries increase, and our many natural resources are developed, the price of farm products will be bound to increase. Fortune hunters of course will be disappointed.
But anyone willing to work, and having any business ability cannot but succeed; and what is better, find a good home here near the home-land to which every Canadian is proud to acknowledge his allegiance and loyalty."

Annual Meeting of Riverside Cemetery

The first annual meeting of the Riverside Cemetery, Bridgetown, was called for the third Tuesday of April, 1913, as provided by section 10 of the act of incorporation and held pursuant to published notice, in the Council Chamber on Tuesday evening April 15th, 1913, at 7.30 o'clock.

The president, J. W. Salter, occupied the chair and read the section of the act under which the meeting was called. He then called upon the Secretary-Treasurer for a written report for the year ending March 13th, 1913.

The report was read and showed a small balance on hand from the year's operations.

It was moved by J. W. Peters and seconded by W. R. Longmire, that the annual report as read be printed and mailed to each lot-holder and also published in the Weekly Monitor.

The matter of choosing seven directors for the ensuing year was next in order and the following were chosen by ballot:—

Dr. M. E. Armstrong, W. R. Longmire, J. W. Peters, H. B. Hicks, J. E. Lloyd, J. W. Salter and H.
Ruggles.

A meeting of the new directors was then held and on motion J. W. Salter was re-elected president; J. E.
Lloyd, vice president, and H. Ruggles secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

Resolved that the thanks of the directors be extended to all the ladies who have so kindly spent their time and energies in raising funds for the improvement of the cemetery, as without their most valuable assistance the work could not possibly have advanced as it has during the past year.

Resolved that the secretary-treasurer be requested to at once collect all the outstanding subscriptions now due the company, as well as the assessments due on each lot for the years 1912 and 1913, as the money is required for improvements during the present summer.

Minutes read and approved.
H. RUGGLES,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Annapolis County Sunday School Association

To the Sunday School Workers of Annapolis County:—

Half of our Sunday School year has gone and the season of warm weather and good roads in which our attendance is usually greatest is upon us. It may be that your Sunday School is one of the few still left which sleep during the winter and wait for the sunny days of May to warm them into activity. If so you should be up and doing as you have a whole year's work crowded into six months or you will be left behind in the race.

The Sunday School Association has been at work in Annapolis County for nearly forty years and has helped many individuals and schools into better and more effective work. But there are still schools we would like to reach which do not send delegates to our conventions, and will not try the improved methods of work which have been successful in other schools and are freely offered to all who try them by the Sunday School Association. The best evidence of the value of our work is the generous way in which it is being supported financially by the schools which have put in practise the Association work. One school contributed $8.00; another $7.08; several gave $5.00. The County Secretary has already received $56.00 on the current year. Melvern Square, Middleton and Annapolis Districts are the largest contributors to this amount. In order to bring the work of the Association before all the Sunday Schools and churches the Provincial Association are preparing a special service to be given by all Sunday Schools which accept it on Sunday, May 25th. Every school will be supplied free with as many copies of the service as they can use to advantage, and it is suggested that pastors speak to their people on that day of the blessings to be gained by attending the Sunday School; also that the offerings of that day, wherever practicable, be appropriated for the work of the Sunday School Association. The form of service will be published in the Sunday School Worker for May.

Please remember that the work of the Annapolis County Sunday School Association is purely a labor of love, that its officers spend their time freely and often pay their own postage, and are always glad to help you to gain information or solve any problem in your Sunday School work.
We would especially call your attention to the Alumni Library which is at the service of any Sunday School teacher, for 25 cts. per year. Hoping that God's blessing may attend your several efforts to advance his cause this year, I am,

Yours in the work,
C. F. ARMSTRONG,
President of Annapolis County
S. S. Association.
