

MAN... beauty, the male creature, pure as down as all shape or no shape. There really are beautiful female women who do not get dimmed with a false suggestion of beauty, neither do they dance on the edge of a precipice. They are women of the same, only that faithful, without the same, and without the same.

...American Federation of Labor, at its annual convention in Detroit, Michigan, with about 2,000 delegates present, passed a resolution for an amendment to the constitution of the United States to give the woman...

...then one always stays at home, and is usually nursing. That is the reason why so many women are petty and unambitious of any sort. They have no ambition until we can take the idea of a truly human family as one of the main objects of education and industry.

...The Women's Educational and Industrial Union has been formed at Watertown, N.Y., making the fifth in the state. The ladies' union is trying to get all the women of the E. and I. Union of the country in order that they may be represented at the first national convention of the National Education and Industrial Union, to be held in Washington next February.

...Mrs. Carrie Steele, of Georgia, has statistics being brought out by the introduction of a bill to amend the law, so that the men of the four trades in which women are engaged are fairly well paid and are not being trained as well. Those who have been built, a larger building is going on and four acres of land cultivation. All these things are outside of the ordinary things that have been raised by the women's personal exertions. She now appeals for help and will probably have a large number of supporters.

...The women of Virginia belonging to the Society for Preservation of the Rights of the Mother, after having spent some time in Washington, and bought the house at Frederickburg in which Washington, D.C., is now being used as a headquarters for the acquisition of the older portion of the city, where the first Congress was held, and the first settlement was made, including the grave yard and ruins of the church tower.

...Miss Julia Hapgood, of Melbourne, Australia, took honors in Greek and French at Melbourne University at the age of sixteen. Now, at nineteen, in the examination for the normal division of the Victoria girl's school, she has received the highest honors.

...The re-election of Mrs. Emily A. Fisked to the office of the National Education and Industrial Union, was a vote cast this year for any candidate, should be a cause of rejoicing to all friends of the school, and especially to all women. It is also a cause of rejoicing to the friends of the Australian ballot.

...The Democratic party, Mrs. Fisked was not on their ticket, but her known fitness, her eminent services and her well-deserved personal popularity have led to a majority of the suffrages of the individual members of the party.

...Rev. Mary A. Sisson, of Sioux City, Ia., lately exchanged pulpits with the noble Jewish synagogue. Miss Sisson is a graduate of the Iowa State University. For three years she had a double pastoral charge, preaching to two churches and one of the finest churches at Algona. She then received a call to the church at Sioux City, Ia., and has since been preaching there.

...Mrs. Francis K. Willard was nominated as a delegate to the Evangelical Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church to be held in Washington in 1891, but the conservative Committee of Bishops and Deacons have thrown out her nomination, solely because she is a woman. If this had been done on the ground of color instead of sex, the whole Methodist church would have been in a state of confusion.

...The same time an effort has been made towards the admission of women to the first school of the Iowa State University in Illinois. Within the past year this university has received in gifts from the women of the state, over $100,000. The trustees of the university have recently voted to accept this fund to admit women. For the purpose of raising the sum, local churches and societies are being formed in Illinois, Michigan, Boston, New Brunswick and...

...where a woman declares she would not wear a low dress at a public entertainment. She says: "I use this of course because I am a woman." This is all they know of it. Many times out of several, Oh, Mr. Man, there are more pretty women in every class scattered through the world than you imagine. One in every ten percentage of the population are women. Many women are valuer even than men in business and industry. The few women do not understand the difference between industry and artifice.

LADY SMOKERS

...because the editor was too large-minded to be troubled by jealousy. The fact of his being a man and a lady being a woman, would not be a reason for his not being a man and a lady being a woman. The fact of his being a man and a lady being a woman, would not be a reason for his not being a man and a lady being a woman.

WORKING WOMEN IN PAIRS

...The terrible condition of the working women has at last attracted the attention of the French Government, and inquiries are being made with a view of alleviating their sufferings. The fact is that in Paris it is scarcely hard to find a woman who is not in any great city, but in Paris it is scarcely hard to find a woman who is not in any great city, but in Paris it is scarcely hard to find a woman who is not in any great city.

WOMAN'S WORK

...The president of the Woman's Industrial League of the United States, Mrs. Charles Smith, writes as follows: "The subject of women as bread winners, and especially the advancement of their means by the organization of a woman's industrial department at the World's Columbian Fair to be held at Chicago in 1892, regarding the fact that women are excluded rapidly from the work of wages earning outside of domestic pursuits and the few trades—such as millinery and dressmaking—to which they may occasionally be admitted within a few years, was especially commended Mrs. President Smith's effort. In doing this we must express our regret that there is any necessity for women to seek employment in so many industries that should find work people everywhere. That the women who are working in workshops at labor that boys should be doing as proof that the social system is out of gear; that women work in the places that men should occupy in addition to their proper work. The pity that they should be compelled to earn a living by their own hands at all occupations, and the effect is had on them and on men, for as a result of the social phase such employment compete with men and reduce their wages to such a degree as to be as great extent as the wages of the women engaged in it. However, we must take things as they are rather than in the way we would like to have them. The women's work and the results of their work should be placed on an exhibition for comparison, not only that the world may see to what extent women's work has gone, but that the world may judge whether it is fair that women should continue to receive less compensation for the same labor than men receive. Mrs. President Smith might accomplish a great deal in addition to her present aims if she should arrange to have an exhibit of the details of women's labor, the continuous work of the women, with their own hands required daily and the wages paid.—National Labor Tribune.

BETTER THAN SHOOTING.

...Heron O'Leary writes as follows in the O'Leary:—A few weeks since, in San Francisco, a wife was informed from one husband to another in a very satisfactory manner. The first husband was an editor, the second a business man and the editor's friend. The wife told the editor that she loved his friend. She then secured a divorce from the first husband, and married the business man. The editor, attended the wedding. The entire affair was conducted without publicity and without disturbing the friendly relations existing between the trio. Was not this a much better arrangement than shooting? The editor had no man or his wife to vindicate his tarnished honor? Was it not much better for the woman to let her name be mentioned in connection with a man who she did not love? And was it not wise and beautiful for the three to continue their friendship under the circumstances? The dearest, quiet, honorable solution of a domestic problem was possible only if people's interests.
