I tore for us.

Imprison'd here for us!

Hush, ye adorers! softly glide.

Humbly, to where He doth abide:
Well may ye ponder with amaze.

As rev'rently on Him ye gaze!

Here for us,
Reigning here for us!
Who is the King whose crown is of thorns,
Clasping His brows with there bonds,
Blinded with precious blood and tears,
Reed-sceptre in His piere'd hands he bears?

Here for us,
Imprison'd here for us!
Who is the Lord, one crucily shim,
Fast bound here with a golden chain,
Chain'd with links of elernal love,
Pleading with His Father above?

Here for us, Wearied here for us! Who is the Master at whose feet All may loarn maxims, wondrous, sweet, But blindly foolish, we turn away, While, pleadingly, He blds us stay?

Here for us, Waiting here for us! Who is the Father, patiently, Heark'ning His lov'd ones burden'd ery, Calling us all to sweetly rest For e'ermore on His shelt'ring breast? Here for us, Outraged here for us! Who is the Friend—none else there is, Surely, whose love can egual His— With sail eyes watching, as, heedlessty, Day by day cold hearts pass him by ?

With such love for us.
With such love for us.
Who is the Shepherd, He who leads
His wearled lambs from the tangling weeds,
So tenderly, to pastures sweet.
Giving Himself to be our Meal?

Hero for us, Humbled here for us! Who but our Jesus!—Loving so well.

He hath sweetly deign'd with us to dwell.

O marvelous, O boundless Love! Making th'earth like to Heav'n above!

Here for us.

Dwelling here for us.

Friend, Saviour, Master, tend'rest of all!
We at Tay feet helpiessly ful!!
Teach us that love, Master, to see—
Keep us, over sweat Saviour, with thee!

which has already done so much for hundreds of little children feeble, faint, and hungry for God's pure air, is a subject to which I would gladly devote a considerable portion of this column even though the season has closed, for, as there were numbers of destitute parents, yearning during the summer, for country air and wholesome food for their pining children. who had to be refused for want of tunds, the few short months of winter are not too long to discuss and arrange the most practical way of procuring sufficient means to supply for the epoor little waifs a treat which to many of them literally vestigating closely how matters were considered a valuable addition to the ducted at a few of the heliday lastness funds. It will be radled on Taesday during the summer. Detail with which the less day of the lerzaar.

But as it means help for Ireland, the good work ought not to be confined to the city only. There are warm Irish hearts scattered through the length and breadth of the Island; surely they will respond to this appeal from an English Protestant, who, with her husband, has done much to ameliorate the wretched condition of the suffering peasantry of Ireland. Were such a proposition made to the Irish in Australia, a generous response would come, swift as a current of the electric spark. Glad hearts, and willing hands, would at once begin the work. and never cease till they had obtained the help required. The cold and frost of this Northern region cannot enter in or chill warm Irish hearts; therefore, may we not expect practical help from those to whom this appeal is made. Those engaged in trade and commerce could form an additional branch to their business, or at least would be better able than others to make useful suggestions. which certainly would be taken up warmly by the editors. But if after a time they should be found "resting upon their oars" in this matter "Ladies' Corner" would come to the rescue, and, by dexterous and swift pulling, would establish securely all plan-for bringing help to the loved ones at press work is carried on.

The Cathedral Bazaar.

The ladies of the different parishes of Montreal, who have really been most untiring in their efforts to make the bazaar a success, in their zeal for the good cause, so far from displaying any signs of weariness towards the end, are redoubling their exertions and showing in a marked way that they are not only willing but pleased that it should remain open a few days longer, notwithstanding the fatigue this will incur and the interruption to their ordinary avocations. As space will not allow of a report of the success of each of the stalls, I can only say a few words about St. Patrick's. To give a list of the names of the ladies at this stall, and detail what they have accomplished during the past fortnight, is what I should like to do: but, alas! I have not at my command a whole page, and it would require at least six columns to do justice to this subject.
