

that characterized the first Elizabethan Age. One illustration of the initiative that Canadians can show is before our eyes right here and now. We know that we shall have our problems, and that some of them will be difficult and anxious. It could hardly be otherwise in the world we live in today. Yet when we take stock of our resources, both human and material, we also know that we can face the future with confidence and great hope.

---

S/A