

The Address—Mr. Gingues

footing with their employers. Mr. Speaker, the saboteur is not Mr. Gerard Picard, president of the C.T.C.C.; it is the dictator of Quebec, who sabotages the Liberal legislation protecting our workers.

Mr. Speaker, I have taken part in many struggles during the past twenty years, but never have I witnessed an election such as that of July 28 last in my province. When I went actively into politics, I laid down a policy for my organizers in the matter of electoral manners. This policy was complied with and I am convinced I have improved electoral methods in my constituency.

Personally I have always believed and I still believe that candidates must appeal to the electors' intelligence. That is what I did. However, those who took part in last summer's election know that some people do not hesitate to resort to all sorts of means to corrupt and buy human consciences. I wonder if those methods will not lead us quicker than anything else to the revolution which the member for Chicoutimi seems to fear.

In my opinion, the methods used during the latest provincial electoral campaigns are far more dangerous than taxes to stir up indignation. The people of my province are now crying over their mistake of July 28.

In conclusion, may I say that although the present government is not perfect, taking its administration as a whole it has faithfully fulfilled its mandate.

Today, under our new leader, we may rightly feel confident, for, as I pointed out earlier, he is a man who loves frankness and truth. With him, we know where we come from and where we head for.

I am satisfied with the way of frankness and truth. I shall fully support my leader and begin by casting my vote in his favour when the motion for the address in reply to the speech from the throne is put before the house.

(Text):

On motion of Mr. Weir the debate was adjourned.

At six o'clock the house adjourned without question put, pursuant to standing order.

---