

greater claim to the confidence of your countrymen, than what arises from your own political safety, and the acts (not words like yours, or acts on paper like Mr. Baldwin's) done in this Province.

I refer to these things thus publicly, because the opinions of the Banner derive much of their importance, from the erroneous impression being very general amongst Presbyterians at a distance, that its sentiments and provincial or local information are advised upon by you, with a committee of "your first and most valued supporters," the gentlemen in this city and neighbourhood, who, as it now turns out, unfortunately for them and the other Presbyterians of the Province, and perhaps for yourselves also, induced the Banner to remove from New York to Toronto.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ISAAC BUCHANAN.
