

manner for the average man of serving his own self-interest.

I have been giving you information as to British Industrial co-operation in which you may consider you are not interested. For that reason possibly I am wearying you. I give you the information not because it directly affects you but to demonstrate the necessity as well as the advantage of our fundamental principle of fraternity in associated industry.

British Agricultural Co-operation

Agricultural co-operation in Britain is in its infancy. I attribute that fact to the feudal atmosphere of the rural districts of England with its consequent distaste for change. Although organized agricultural co-operation in Britain is barely a decade old it is making great strides. It's welfare is looked after by the Agricultural Organisation Society which was incorporated as recently as 1901. It imposes similar conditions as to ethics and methods as the industrial movement and works in perfect harmony therewith, the purpose of the one being to supplement the other on every possible occasion.

As the working men's societies spend half a million dollars annually in co-operative education and one-
