

who, during the last thirty years, have been rapidly advancing in experience and arrangement; but these reflections come too late to be useful, and I will conclude by expressing my earnest hope that the time already lost may warn us of the dangers of further delay.

W. B.