Of his moral character I know nothing unfavourable. I believe that he would fulfil the duties of the office he seeks in every way efficiently.

I remain, gentlemen,.
Your obedient servant,
HENRY WALL,

Prælector of Logic and Fellow of Baliol. Baliol, Oxford, January 1, 1851.

From the Rev. Campbell Grey Hulton, M.A., Rector of Emberton, Bucks.

Emberton Rectory, Buckingham, Dec. 30., 1850. Gentlemen.

Having learnt that Mr. Ambery is a candidate for the vacant Assistant Mastership of your School at ..., I take the liberty of recommending him to your kind and favorable attention.

I have known him now for many years, and consider him well fitted for such a situation. He would be, I doubt not, kind and considerate in the treatment of his pupils, and in point of scholarship and application, well calculated to educe and strengthen their abilities. You will have, I feel confident, sufficient testimonials from his own college at Oxford, where he distinguished himself by obtaining a high class at the public examination. I shall take the liberty of recommending him to you rather on the ground of his moral and religious character. He was a constant communicant at my church when I was incumbent at St. Paul's, in Manchester; and, during the time when he was at home for the long vacation, we were in the habit of meeting together very early in the morning to read the Ethics of Aristotle and other works (as, e.g., Butler's Analogy) which would prove useful to him in his examination. On these grounds, I can safely recommend him to you for the office he is seeking in your establishment. I beg to subscribe myself,

Your obedient, faithful servant, C. G. Hulton.
