at work in Hamilton, it is clear they ave been successful in blinding the itizens to the advantages held out by the hydro-electric power commission. An attempt is being made to lure the citizens into a contract to buy street-lighting from the Cataract Power Company for $85 a lamp, when a glance at the report of the first commission will show that a rate of $65 would be exoptitant, when Toronto can be supplied at $53.30 per light all night and every night in the year, or under an alternative scheme for $47.25. The whole of the western section as planned in the commission's scheme for the distribution of power for Niagara is now complete, the demands for power exceeding the maximum estimates at first tees to the different schools for the plete, the demands for power exceeding the maximum estimates at first made, and amounting, as Hon. Adam Beck reported yesterday, to 71,000 horse-power. Hamilton stands aloof under the influence of the Cataract Power Company, and is in risk of capitulating to a demand for street lighting anywhere from 25c to 40c on the dollar in excess of what is reasonable. If the Hamilton people are satisfied to pay at these rates well and good. If they wish to secure the advantages which every other municipality in the province in a position to do so is determined upon, and for which Hamilton is more favorably situated than any, they will lose no time in applying to the hydro-electric power commission for terms on which their requirements can be supplied.
