UNCLE OLIVER AND THE MAIL. If you see it in The Mail you can put it down as not being so. That paper seems to have the most marvelous facility of getting on the wrong side of everything, and never, even by chance, on the right side of anything. Yesterday it took occasion to deal with Sir Oliver Mowat as a tried to make out that he was nothing but a dummy, and that "his influence in the shaping of the tariff will be as slight as is his knowledge of it."

Now, The World's opinion of Sir this issue, where "Uncle Oliver" is represented as advising Mr. Laurier to be as protectionist as the preceding Government. We believe that Sir Oliver is very much of a pro-Fielding and Sir Richard, and that it was his influence more than that ed Sir Richard from becoming Minister of Finance. "Uncle Oliver" is a very able politician and The Mail newspaper is a very foolish journal, and somehow both of these opinions Heavy All-wool Hose, wide rib, are very generally accepted by the people of Canada, Conservatives as well as Reformers. And one proof that Sir Oliver knows a thing or two gentleman in his fight with the aghildren's Fancy Scalloped Bordered Hand-kerchiefs, regular price 4c each; Fri-day, 3 for 5c.

Montreal, Dec. 2.—The United States and Hayti Telegraph and Cable Co., having laid a cable direct from New York to Hayti, is now open for business to all South American points. This cable gives the Canadian Pacific Rallway's telegraph, Postal Telegraph and Commercial Cable Co. a more direct connection with all points in South America, which has heretofore been monopolized by the Western Union Telegraph Co., via Florida. The service was inaugurated this morning with a substantial reduction in rates.

BROWN DECLINES TO ANSWER.

With a view to discredit Mr. Brown, Mr.
Denton asked him if it was not a fact that after the Brougham brass band had given a concert at Pickering, of which he was collector, he had left with the funds and been away several months. He was also asked if he had since paid over any of the funds, but he declined to answer any of the questions.

Stanley Gerow was called by Mr. Brown.
He said the destroyed matter would fill
about two barrels, but included no mail matter.

ccived the package.

THE ALLEGED LOST PARCEL.

Mr. J. W. Hogle gave the history of the alleged lost parcel. It had been register ed so far back as Dec. 21, 1893, at Prairie Grove. Man., by Mrs. James Bemmy, a reletive of his wife, and addressed to her. Mrs. Bemmy said she had sent it on, but it had never reached his wife. He made no complaint at the time and let the matter rest until this summer. In August Brown told him he had seen in the office a package addressed to his wife from Prairie Grove. He said it looked like containing handkerchiefs. He never applied personally to Willis for the package, but his wife sent the little girl, aged 13, for it, but he did not know if she had asked for it. Brown inquired if he had he received it. He said no and he then told Prown to write out the complaint and sign his (Hogle's) name to it. This was done about the end of August. He never mentioned the loss of the vackage to any other persons until the complaint had been lodged. The complaint was privately investigated.

Numbers Ever Issued in Canada.

Among the many special holiday numbers piaced before the public this year, the Christmas issue of Toronto Saturday Night should prove one of the most popular, and especially should this be the case as far as Canadians are concerned, for the publication is written, illustrated, edited and printed by Canadians for Canadians. The number, and a most creditable one it is from the standpoint of the artist, the litterateur or the patriot, is the product of Canadian brains, and rings with the true Canadian spirit. From the artistic cover design to the last advertisement in the issue, the work is beautifully done.

The supplement consists of a copy of a realistic conception of the Battle of Queenston Heights, done in oil especially for Saturday Night, by J. D. Kelly. The work represents the opposing forces of Canada and the United States, with their Indian allies, in deadly conflict upon the memorable battlefield. The central figure of the group in the foreground is Sir Isaac Brock, fallen, and with his dying breath urging his men on to victory. The picture will stir the heart of a Canadian or a Britisher, and to those who have elimbed Queenston Heights or seen Brock's monument it should prove especially inspiring. A graphic story of the battle from the pen of Lieut. Col. G. T. Denison is a fitting accompaniment to the artist's effort.

Other notable features of the number are: "His Discovery of Himself," a characteristic sketch by E. E. Sheppard (Don), with illustrations by D. A. McKellar; "The Failure of a Success," by Mack; "The Burlal of Tecumseh," a poem by W. T. Allison; "The Postmen of the North," a full-page illustration of a Hudson Bay Company's dog mail train, by O. H. H. Heming; "The Amber Drop," a charming love story by the Marquis of Lorne, illustrated by Arthur J. Goodman; "Before Parisian Footlights," by Annie McQueen, with illustrations by G. A. Beld, R.C.A., and others. A number of other stories, sketches, poems and full-page illustrations complete the list of good things
