

10,000 MILE GOLF TOUR ARRANGED

Hutchinson and Barnes Have Planned a Busy Winter Session.

New York, Dec. 9.—Ten thousand miles by rail and road; one thousand more on the links.

That is the ambitious itinerary by which Jim Barnes of Pelham, the American open golf champion, and Jack Hutchinson of Glenview, open champion of Great Britain, will tour the West and South this winter, giving exhibitions as they go. It is by long odds the most pretentious exhibition tour ever arranged for a pair of golfers in this country.

In all, the affair will carry through some thirteen weeks, from December 15 to March 22, during which the champions will roam up and down the Canadian Northwest, the Pacific Coast and later the warm and genial South. In addition to the exhibition dates, Barnes and Hutchinson will also take part in the North California open tournament, January 6 and 7, and California state championship at Wilshire, January 18 to 19 inclusive.

Leaving the Grand Central Station on Thursday, Jim and Jack will travel the long trail to Vancouver, B. C., where the first match of the tour will be played. Then by easy stages they will work down into California, where the sun is kindly and the competition keen. Indeed, the Native Sons think so well of some of their "pros" that they are willing to back them against the champion duo to no inconsiderable extent.

For instance, a match involving Hutchinson and Barnes on one side and John Black and Abe Espinosa, two Californians, on the other, has been arranged with a side bet of $1,000. This would seem to indicate that either Black and Espinosa are uncommonly good golfers or Californians do not object to tossing their money around with lavish hands. Certainly no pair of golfers in the country can figure as an even money bet against such as Hutchinson and Barnes, who are easily the best of the American field, with the possible exception of Walter Hagen.

Before the champions venture into California, however, they will play plenty of competition at Victoria, B. C., in meeting Dave Black and Phil Taylor, both of whom rank with the best of the professionals west of the Rockies.

Down Los Angeles way it has been arranged for Arthur Clarkson and MacDonald Smith to oppose the Barnes-Hutchinson team on the links of the Ambassador Club. This means another keen match, particularly since MacDonald Smith is generally regarded as being one of the finest golfers in the country.

The two California championships in which the wayfarers will appear, are especially arranged, in the matter of dates, to suit the convenience of the champions. It is also likely that Barnes and Hutchinson will subsequently play in a San Antonio professional tournament, for which a purse of $5,000 has already been subscribed.

After leaving San Diego the pilgrim golfers will work over into Arizona and New Mexico, and then push south into Texas, where they expect to be joined by a group of "pros" from this section of the country also on tour through Texas, Louisiana and Florida.

This is all virgin territory, as far as Barnes and Hutchinson are concerned, as indeed is the entire itinerary. Golfers in the sections to be visited have read much of the exploits of Jack and Jim, but few have seen them in the flesh. On this account the trip promises to be a rare financial success that might well be carried through the spring and summer were this practicable. Indeed, the two stars are in such demand that several clubs in Mexico have entered bids for their services but, unfortunately, they will be unable to appear on the wrong side of the Rio Grande, owing to the fact that the previous dates demand their presence elsewhere.

Subsequently, the tour will be carried into Florida, but here the exhibitions will be few and far between. One will be given at Jacksonville, but after that is concluded both stars will lay aside their clubs and undergo a complete rest for two weeks. After that they will take up serious preparations for the important north and south championship at Pinelust late in March.

COMPARISON OF FATHER AND SON

Young Bob Fitzsimmons Cannot Hit as Hard as His Daddy Could.

Writing to the New York World, Igor says:

This is the strange case of Young Bob Fitzsimmons and his old man, a fighting immortal. There crawled through the ropes at Madison Square Garden a few nights ago, to make his first fight before "big bugs," Bob, son of Fitzsimmons. There was a rumble of exclamations as this tall, round-shouldered youth tossed off his bath robe, gloves strapped to his powerful looking arms, ready to make his first bid for fame in New York, hotbed of pugilism.

Men old in the sport marvelled at the great similarity between Bob the present and Bob gone down in the great divide. Around Young Bob's loins fitted snugly his old man's famous white woollen fighting trunks. Through the loops at the waist was belted the striped silk belt that the old man wore around his middle at Carson City the day he belted Jim Corbett in the belly and brought to life the "solar plexus" punch. The old man's thighs having gone through countless jactos with molts these many years, were patched in twenty different places with darning wool that hadn't been aged to the tint of the thighs. On the boy's feet were the old man's fighting brogans, the families white wools socks rolling over the tops of the shoes. The same long freckled arms, the steel-blue eyes, even the tremendously rounded muscular back in the making, of his old man.

And with these resemblances of an amazing fighting sire, young Bob Fitzsimmons stepped forward under the same rafters that had echoed his old man's acclaim to be a shock and awe appointment! How they did want Bob's boy to loom up as the son of his old man! How breathlessly the old guard watched him shuffle forward, even as the old man, to take his fling at fame and he died dead in the debut.

Oh, he whipped Keiser, that's true. He got a judge's decision, but there was the big thing lacking in his coming-out party. The thing they all looked for, hopefully, with eager, widened eyes was his old man's punch. Not a sign of it. Could it be possible that this big, husky kid, looking so much like the old man could not hit hard enough to knock a diploma's stoppage list off? That was just it. He couldn't. He hasn't got the punch. Hasn't got "the old man's wallop, the sock that broke great fighters' hearts in the long ago.

And it seemed a pity. He looked so formidable, yet when it came to dropping the lighter Keiser he swayed and tottered in front of him throughout eight rounds, but Bob, the son of his father, could not drop him. Pity the ring warrior that swayed before his old man. Any man who tottered before old Bob was doomed and doom came with the blinding crash of thunder.

Old Fitz could hit. Fifteen pounds lighter than his boy, Fitz laughed at weight handicap. His theory was "the bigger they are the harder they fall" and they fell. Fitz the elder appreciated the worth of hitting and respected a hitter. Strangely enough, one of the smallest men he ever fought hit him the hardest.

The writer dropped in on Fitz fourteen years ago at his ranch at Dunsmuir, N. J., and the conversation drifted around to hitting. For a change I asked him how it felt to be hit hard and who had hit him the hardest. Bob didn't have to jog his memory. He had his pet wallop's name right on the tip of his tongue.

The hardest punch I ever got in all my life was delivered by little Joe Chynski," said Fitzsimmons.

JUDGE REFUSES TO GRANT BAIL

Determined to Make Things Hard for Violent Men and Burglars.

(Montreal Herald)

When George Lamoureux, who gave his address as 275 St. Lawrence Boulevard, asked for bail this morning, charged with having stolen a car, Judge Lanctot refused it in any amount the accused could produce. He remarked that the case with which it appeared to him that opium, cocaine and heroin could be purchased was by no reason for its destructive use by the youth of the city.

"Hereafter, cases of drugs, burglaries, robberies and all such crimes, stealing of automobiles and thefts from the person, will have a hard road to travel when prisoners appear before me. The frequency of attacks on the streets, the prevalence of dope-saturated men, the alarming number of automobile thefts and similar offenses must be checked. The way I propose to curb lawbreaking is through refusal to give bail. In the future, bail will not be sanctioned for the perpetrators of acts of violence or burglaries," said the judge who remanded Lamoureux for trial without bail.

ALCOHOL FIGURED IN TWO DEATHS

Suicide Verdict Returned on Longueuil Man Who Took Poison.

(Montreal Herald)

Two cases in which the victims met their deaths either directly or indirectly through alcoholic poisonings were disposed of by Coroner McMahon this morning.

The first inquest was upon Robert Hilton, 30 years of age, of 5,000 Western avenue, N. D. G., who died on his way to the hospital on Sunday night, after being found lying on the doorstep on St. Lawrence street in an unconscious condition. Evidence submitted showed that the man had been drinking heavily and an autopsy proved that death was caused through alcoholic poisoning.

The Coroner rendered a verdict of accidental death. In the case of Joseph Debe, 43 years of age, 114 St. James' avenue, Longueuil a common poison had been the immediate cause of death but, after an autopsy, alcohol was shown to have been one of the indirect causes. A verdict of suicide was given, because of the statement made by deceased to the doctor shortly before his death, in which he said he was discouraged by unemployment, and had taken the poison to end his life. He had been drinking heavily for some time past, according to relatives.

portrayed the government officials "in a manner not consistent with the majesty of their office."

BLAZING TURPENTINE BURNS BOY TO DEATH

Barrel Exploded and John Carbons Was Caught and Enveloped in Flames.

(New York Times)

Blazing turpentine flowing from a barrel which had exploded in front of Isidore Bund's paint store at 211 Chrystie street yesterday afternoon enveloped a ten-year-old boy, John Carbons, of 218

Chrystie street, and burned him so badly that he died two hours later in Knickerbocker Hospital, Charlotte Park, 17 years old, of 2 Suffolk street and two painters who were in the store were cut off by the rapid spread of the flames and saved only by prompt action of firemen, who wrenched iron bars from windows in the rear of the store.

The explosion, the cause of which is unknown, was heard for two blocks, and a sheet of the burning fluid shot out and flew over the sidewalk. The Carbons boy, caught before he could move, staggered out of the flames with his clothing on fire. Passersby caught him, rolled him in the gutter water and hurried him to the hospital. He inhaled some of the fumes and was also badly burned.

The heat from the burning barrel of turpentine broke the store windows, and the flames spread to the paints and varnishes in the store. There was no time for Miss Farb and the painters to rush through the door, and they made their way to the back, where they found escape was cut off by a locked door and barred windows. They were nearly overcome with fumes from the burning paints when firemen of Truck 5 rescued them.

Above the paint store is a tenement in which twenty families live, and those who were caught escaped by going to the roof and down through the next building. The flames were not put out for several minutes.
