

MOTHER DIED LAST WEEK; DAUGHTER PASSED AWAY EARLY THIS MORNING

Rev. Dr. Henie is Again Bereaved, by Death of Mrs. Otty Lingley, Married Less Than Year—Leaves Baby Boy

Sorrow anew has come to Rev. R. Henie, Ph. D., who only last week suffered the loss of his wife. Early this morning his daughter Ayesha, wife of Otty Lingley, a street railway conductor, passed away after a brief illness at her home, 188 Prince street, West End. Mrs. Lingley was but nineteen years old and had been married less than a year. Only on last Thursday her mother died and it is thought that the young woman contracted the disease, pluro-pneumonia, which caused her death, while waiting on her mother. Mrs. Lingley faced death with great Christian fortitude. She is survived by a baby son of only four days, her husband, father, three sisters and two brothers. The sisters are Bessie at home, Alice, married in Douglas, N. B., and Sarah, with her; and the brothers are Eulus of Caribou, Me., and Wilkins at home. To all will go out the deep sympathy of many in their great sorrow.

TIMID ONES ANXIOUS IN INDIANTOWN TODAY

Actually Worried Over Fire Prediction and Glad When May 20 Ends

This is a long and weary day for some timid ones in Indiantown. Some residents are keeping closely within doors and watching against any possible outbreak of fire for this is the fateful day on which the prophecy of a knowing squaw was to be fulfilled. Last night some actually slept with all their clothes on, and some did not care to retire at all. But the fire has not yet come. No alarm was sounded today. That no regular holiday was allowed to the men in the fire stations in North End was not appreciated breathlessly by some anxious persons. Little children visited the fire houses yesterday afternoon and this morning and eagerly inquired of the men in uniform, "What time does the fire take place?" Two married women of Indiantown have been in the habit of attending the matinees of the Thompson-Woods Co. every Wednesday. They have not missed more than two during the season, but they are missing from the audience today. By mutual agreement they decided to stay away to protect their homes when the fire broke out. The experience of one North End fireman in connection with the prophecy is narrated on page 5 of the Times today. He is not in any too cheerful a frame of mind. More than one house has been protected by a fire insurance policy within the last fortnight. One man who had planned on building a house decided to wait until after today before starting. Up to 2 o'clock, however, there was no sign of fire, and perhaps by tomorrow the young ladies who refused to enjoy their proper sleep, and the ladies who refrained from shopping, visiting, or attending the matinee today will regret their act. Squaws will be unwelcome visitors to Indiantown homes for some time.

SENTENCED IN CALAIS

Frank Mahar Said to Have Been In St. John

Eastport, May 20—Frank Mahar of Calais was before Judge E. W. Pike, in the municipal court on Monday on three complaints. The first two were for larceny of money and a revolver from the cabin of two vessels at Lubec. He pleaded guilty to the first two charges and was sentenced to sixty days in Machias jail. On the charge of breaking into the station, he was held for the grand jury in the sum of $800. Being unable to obtain sureties he will be obliged to stay in jail until the October term of court. Mahar came to Lubec from St. John, early in the week and had been hanging around the water front in that town for several days. He was apprehended by the officers at Calais and brought to this city Monday.

AS SOLUTION OF HOUSE PROBLEM

R. H. Bruce Applies Study In England to St. John

THE GARDEN SUBURB

Gives Results of Observation in Old Country; and Says This City Offers Almost Ideal Opportunity For Carrying Out Plan Scientifically

The possibilities of the garden suburb as a solution of the housing problem in St. John and other Canadian cities was strongly impressed upon R. H. Bruce, of this city during a four months' visit to the old country. He made a careful study of modern housing ideas. The fact which left the greatest impression upon him was that it was possible to secure almost ideal living conditions at a cost little, if any, greater than the expenditure involved in the usual haphazard extensions to cities with their accompanying disadvantages. Speaking of the result of his investigations, Mr. Bruce said: "One of the matters which interested me the most and to which I gave considerable study while in England was the effort which is being made to solve the housing problem in a satisfactory manner. Work along this line has been carried to a high state of development around various English cities, and the results secured are well worth studying. "One of the first experiments in providing what is now known as a garden suburb is found at Letchworth, near London. This was inspired by a book written by Ebenezer Howard, an idealist evidently without much practical knowledge and the suburb follows his idealistic views. The same effect is found at Bourneville, near Birmingham and Fort Sunlight, near Liverpool. Both of these schemes were largely idealistic and philanthropic and show errors due to the lack of practical ideas. The chief mistake was that of the effort to provide sufficient ground room, and this carried to an extreme. "For instance, too much space was left for parks and recreation grounds. One of these suburbs has a grand circle 400 feet wide, and all have paved avenues much wider than needed. The result was that small communities were burdened with wider roads and more parks than they could afford to keep up. The whole scheme was carried out in a neglect which greatly detracts from the appearance of places which otherwise might have been as beautiful as those who laid them out intended. "This was not a basic fault, however, and there was so much of good in the idea that it has been copied all over England, each succeeding garden suburb profiting by the mistakes of those which preceded it. "The finest results of this process of the evolution of the garden suburb are now found around Hampstead. Here the best ideas have been adopted, but the whole scheme has been carried out on a purely practical basis. The ideas sought for are attained, and, at the same time, the security is maintained in a manner which makes the project a sound and which returns a reasonable dividend on the investment. "The idea of the garden suburb is to provide comfortable homes amid pleasant surroundings, with due attention to convenience, sanitation and the provision of sufficient light, air and garden space. This can be attained only by careful and far-sighted planning, and by the co-operation of all those interested, the owners of the land, the builders, those who occupy the buildings and the public authorities. "The first element is the scientific planning of the layout of the district to be developed, in order that the appearance of the place shall be as attractive as possible with sufficient light, air and ground space with streets of sufficient width, but without the sacrifice of too much land or imposing too heavy burdens on those who must afterwards keep up the grounds and streets. "The proper placing of the buildings to secure the best results from the minimum amount of land must be considered, so as to secure the maximum of comfort and convenience with the least expenditure. It has been shown that these results can all be secured with no greater expense than is involved in the usual haphazard method of construction. Rents "The rents in these model suburbs range all the way from $75 a year for a very complete little semi-detached home for a workman to $650 a year for a large mansion, but the chief object has been to provide homes for workers and men on small salaries, and the accommodation supplied is vastly superior to anything that could be secured elsewhere for the same amount of rent. "The development of the garden suburb has reached its highest point of development in Great Britain, although Germany has some excellent examples of the results which can be secured by the same methods. The plan has hardly been attempted in Canada or the United States, the nearest approach to it being the high-class residential suburbs, the cost of which has excluded all but people of considerable means. "The system cannot be transplanted bodily to Canada, as climatic conditions and the requirements of the people differ somewhat. The same figures would not apply either, as the cost of labor and materials is much cheaper in the old country, but this is offset by the higher average income of the rent payer in this country. As to St. John "Nothing else has been found that so nearly meets the demand for better housing accommodation as the garden suburb, and it is inevitable that the system will be adopted on this side of the water sooner or later. St. John offers an almost ideal opportunity for scientific town planning. The whole city has been built up almost entirely in one congested district, leaving open all the surrounding districts open for modern development. There is so little to be done that the problem would be much simpler here than in many other cities, and splendid results could be secured by the co-operation of the owners of the lands, the public authorities and those who are seeking homes. "The importance of this subject has been recognized by our board of trade which already has a committee on town planning and housing. I was also pleased to see that St. John is to be represented

THIRD CHARGE IN MARK CAREY CASE

That of Selling Liquor on April 25—L. P. D. Tilley Interested Spectator

Another charge is to be entered against Mark Carey. He has pleaded guilty to the charge of assaulting Detective Lucas when he was being arrested and also to the charge of keeping liquor for sale without having a license. Detective Lucas said in court this morning that he could hardly suppose they could be in charge of selling liquor by Carey on April 25, and he will be tried on the third charge on Friday morning, when the magistrate said he would deliver judgment in each of the three cases. In connection with the first charge, E. S. Ritchie, who appeared for the prisoner, did not take the stand. Mr. Ritchie said that the assault was admitted, but he thought that the warrant for Carey's arrest should have been given to any other than Lucas, since the two were not on good terms. E. B. Seely, ex-secretary of state for war, expressed the belief that the problem of the stability of the aeroplane had been solved. He himself on Friday last flew with a pilot, who, at a height of 2,000 feet abandoned all control of the machine for fifteen minutes, the aeroplane righting itself automatically. Colonel Seely simply steered the machine while the pilot held his hands behind his head. A similar flight by automatic control, lasting ten minutes, was made yesterday at Farnborough before the king and queen. The invention is considered of high importance.
