New York, March 8—Through the generosity of Theodore E. Steinway, the Collector's Club of this city has just received one of the largest and most valuable philatelic libraries in the world. It includes practically everything that was published in all languages on philately in the nineteenth century, comprising nearly 1,200 volumes and about 30,000 periodicals with many society publications and early price lists of postage stamps. The library represents virtually the life work of a prominent Austrian, Judge Victor Suppantschitsch.

The library has just been placed in the rooms of the Collectors' Club at 120 West Forty-ninth street, and a few days ago the deed of gift was signed by the trustees who will hold Mr. Steinway is one of the trustees and others who signed were John N. Luff. President of the club; Secretary J. Brace Chittenden; Alfred F. Lichenstein and Julius C. Morgenthau. Mr. Steinway has been an active member of the club for many years and his collection of postage stamps ranks among the noteworthy ones in this country.

Her nerves were so excited I feared I would have to take her out of school, for while doing her lessons she could hardly keep still and at times couldn't write at all. Her appetite was so poor she scarcely ate enough to sustain life, and her sleep was so restless she was always tired and worn out.

cently of the star Beta Ceti, which was reported to have flared up suddenly to several times its size, make it seem unlikely that anything very sensational has really happened to that star, Dr. Henry Norris Russell of Princeton said.

"There are a number of stars which are known to vary irregularly, and this seems to be one of them," said Professor Russell, who has recently received the Draper Medal and the medal of the British Royal Astronomical Society for his researches.

"Betelguese, the giant star that was measured a year or two ago, is sometimes twice as bright as at other times. Nothing is known as to the reason for these changes. In the case of Beta Ceti, there is nothing unusual about its spectrum, nothing that would ordinarily put it in the class of irregular stars.

"It is very difficult to determine the amount of increase in brightness in Beta Ceti, because it is a very faint star. The amount of increase has to be estimated by the eye and a good deal depends on the observer. The changes in a bright star can be much more accurately estimated.

"The change in Beta Ceti, whether great or moderate, is not necessarily of sudden occurrence. It is apparently much brighter now than it was some years ago, but it is not known that any one has studied it carefully in recent

Sprains and Bruises

A sprain or strain is the stretching or tearing of the ligament about a joint or the fibres of a muscle. Besides the soreness there is inflammation shown in redness and swelling

Prompt rubbing with Dr. Chase's Liniment brings the blood to the surface of the skin, reduces the inflammation and congestion and takes out the soreness.

After applying the liniment for Sprains or Bruises the sore parts should be bandaged or wrapped with cloth.

Relief comes almost like magic when Dr. Chase's Liniment is promptly used for Sprains and Bruises and it is equally effective in the relief of other forms of pain such as rheumatism, lumbago, backache, etc.
