

LITTLE HONORA MULLALLY.

Poor little Honora Mullally. At the close of Thanksgiving day, was standing in front of her alley...

THE HOME.

Write to Them.

"Yes, Tom said that he morning, while he stood in the hall, surrounded by trunks and boxes, and tried to look mainly sad...

fourteen little notes carefully tied up, and none of them contained anything but these few words: 'This is the way we succeeded in managing matters. There was no scramble or hurry for envelope or stamp for a package of stamped envelopes, all directed, occupied a special pigeon-hole of the library desk, and in each was a blank sheet of letter-paper. This was Belle's idea. Then we took turns; first mother did it for a week, then each of the sisters, and the result was that Tom had a letter from some one at home every day, even if it were but a very few words.'

THE FARM.

A CHEAP FERTILIZER.—The following composition is recommended by a chemical authority as a cheap and reliable substitute for commercial fertilizers, such as phosphates, etc. Take one barrel of pure, raw, finely-ground bones, and one barrel of the best wood ashes, mix them on a floor, and add gradually three pails of water, mixing thoroughly with the hoe. Use in small quantities in about the same manner as the superphosphates. If the ashes cannot be procured, dissolve twelve pounds of potash in ten gallons of hot water, and mix this solution with the bone flour thoroughly; a barrel of dry peat or good loam without stones may be added. The mixture should not be sticky; neither too moist nor too dry. In applying it avoid direct contact with the seed; for instance, when applied in the hill, scatter a little earth over it before dropping the seed. A very early visible effect should not be anticipated; but the good results will manifest themselves as the season advances.

TEMPERANCE.

"I'll give up this sort of thing after I am married," said Perry Ralston, as he raised a glass half filled with the dark colored liquid and drained it to the last drop.

not have continued his remarks even if he had desired to do so; for by this time the carnalities of the lounge, the lounge, breathing heavily and hilling the atmosphere with the fumes of the vile stuff that had been the cause of so many untold heart aches.

An hour later Myra Ralston, with face blanched to a deathlike pallor, entered the room. She paused beside the recumbent figure and clasped her hands convulsively. Hot tears fell from her burning eyes, and her hands trembled as she placed a large shawl upon the form of the man who was bringing distress and misery into a home that might have been one of the happiest on earth.

"Poor Myra! The time of thy visitation is come. May the black surge of thy desolation be tempered by a merciful God!"

"Can't do it, Ralston. You owe us five dollars now, and boss gave orders to shut down on you," said the bar-keeper, scowling.

"Here, take this," said Perry Ralston, handing the man a child's gold ring.

"I'll take the ring," said the man, closing his fingers upon it quickly; "but it will have to help to pay off the old debt, for the concluded, with a tantalizing laugh."

"It was Bertie's ring. Myra gave it to me to buy bread and coal," muttered Perry, as he turned away from the bar.

"There is a stir at the door, and the next moment a man bearing a child in his arms entered the room.

"Guess this youngster's done for; I found him in the snow drift under the window," said the man, moving towards the stove.

"Throw the brat out again; there's no room for him here!" said the proprietor, brutally, at the same time coming forward as if to carry out his inhuman order.

"Shame!" Seeing that he had gone too far, the man drew back and permitted the person who held the child to approach the fire.

"Nothing, nothing whatever," replied the young man, hurriedly, evidently anxious to avoid a quarrel. "Come," he said, carelessly, "suppose we take a stroll up Broadway."

As the two young men sauntered along down Broadway, no fine words were exchanged, but they were partly intoxicated, or that they had been upon the verge of a quarrel.

The man whose reasoning powers have been destroyed by the demon Rum stands upon a smouldering volcano, which may at any moment destroy him, body and soul. Many a life has been forfeited or spent behind the bars of a prison in payment of the blow given to a resent a fancied insult. Father, mother, wife and child are made to feel the unjust fury of a drunkard's frenzy, and, as they crouch trembling at the sound of the dreaded footsteps, may God in His infinite mercy watch over them.

"You are not going out to-night, Perry? I thought perhaps you would like to hear the new song that I have been practicing."

"Both the song! Bring Bertie out of the nursery; he will enjoy it immensely!" said Perry Ralston, as he drew on his overcoat.

The young wife turned aside her head to hide the tears that dimmed her eyes.

"You wouldn't have me give up the club, Myra? The fellows would say that I was henpecked; and you wouldn't have them even think of such a thing—now would you, Myra?" asked Perry, persistently.

THE GOLD IN HEAD CATARRH STAGES CONSUMPTION 4 DEATH.

There is positive danger to health and life in neglecting a case of Cold in the Head or Catarrh, and at this season with its changeable weather, unusual moisture and sudden changes from heat to cold, there is peculiar liability to cold in the head.

Mr. Alex. Burns, of Sudbury, Ont., says: "I may state that I have been afflicted with Catarrh for seven or eight years, and it has attended with consequent symptoms such as foul breath, constant dripping into the throat, hawking and spitting, partial deafness, hoarseness, and a general feeling of debility, husky voice, a wheezing or crackling sound in the head directly over either eye. I have used powders and all kinds of remedies, but the only relief arising from use of such was temporary relief, followed by the usual symptoms in a more aggravated form. The results arising from the use of Nasal Balm are sweet breath, stoppage of the droppings into the throat, clearness of hearing, and not one slice of mucus has been expelled since the use of it. In fact it is my opinion that a careful and persistent use of the Balm will effect a cure in any case of Catarrh."

James H. McLeod, Mink River Road, N. S., says: "I have tried other remedies for Catarrh, but received little or no good from them. Your Nasal Balm is certainly the BEST REMEDY I have tried, and all you claim for it. The fact that it is pleasant and convenient to use adds greatly to its value, but its chief worth lies in being a CERTAIN CURE for that unpleasant disease—Catarrh."

W. A. Doyle, Baulnah, Man. writes: "As a family medicine to check Catarrh affections of the Head, NASAL BALM HAS NO EQUAL. We prize it highly."

Mr. A. Schilling, Toronto, says: "For a number of years my wife has been badly troubled with Catarrh. Dr. Schilling's remedy for six months she became worse and weaker than before, and I found that I had spent $20 for medical treatment that did me no good. My wife then began to use your NASAL BALM, and made a new man of me. She is better and stronger than for years, and our remedy is the best in the market, and I have never used a remedy so satisfactory."

EMILIE PELLISSIER, Grenville, says: "I can scarcely find words to tell you how highly I value your Balm. Its effects in my case have been wonderful."

Alpha H. Daley, Tarboro, Ont., writes: "Your NASAL BALM has made a new man of me. I have never used a remedy so satisfactory."

CAUTION.—Beware of Imitations. If your dealer has not NASAL BALM in stock, do not let him persuade you to take any other, and it will be sent you on receipt of price—30 cents and $1.00 a BOTTLE.
