MEETING AT SUSSEX IN INTEREST OF RECRUITS

Mayor McKay in opening the meeting said its object was not a reflection upon the loyalty of the people. Such meetings were being held all over the empire. In England Premier Asquith and Bonar Law were addressing such meetings. Great reliance was placed on the British navy and such reliance was justified. But other arms of the service should be supported with men. Mayor McKay then called upon Rev. Canon Neales to open the proceedings with prayer and as the Canon, who wore a military uniform, made a prayer for the success of British arms, the audience stood.

Mr. Fowler Unable to Be Present
J. D. McKenna then sang Rule Britannia with fine effect. The Chairman read the following telegram: "Regret important business prevents being with you tonight, best wishes for a successful meeting and enthusiastic response."
GEO. W. FOWLER.
A quartette composed of J. D. McKenna, H. W. Black, H. Wallace, A. Black sang "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the audience joining in the chorus with great enthusiasm.

Bishop Richardson, the first speaker, said the purpose of the meeting was to assert the sanctity of treaties between nations, to assert the right of small nations to life, to deny the pernicious doctrine that might was right, and to declare with heart and soul and voice that Britons never shall be slaves. (Applause.)
Genesis of the War
The world is at war. It began with little Serbia, some individuals assassinating the Austrian Archduke, not with the Serbian State. Austria stepped in demanding the right to act as judge and jury. Would any nation submit to such a demand as that? Serbia refused to be tried and sentenced by an interested party. Austria declared war. Russia came into the conflict because the Serbians were Slavs. Then Germany stepped in. She bade Russia stop mobilizing her forces or she would strike. What could Russia do but stand by her little brother. This brought France into it. If Germany smashed Russia she would turn and demolish France, and then England came into it for she had pledged her word to France and Britain always keeps her word. (Applause.) There was more than that to it. England asked if Germany would leave French colonies alone and Germany would give no answer. It was like asking the wolf to spare the sheep fold. And there was more than that. Great Britain asked Germany if she would respect the neutrality of Belgium, but Germany said, "Excuse. Rapidity of action is our greatest asset." Great Britain's asset in war was honor, she stood for the rights and liberties of small nations. Who can

BREAK PAROLE AND DISGUISED AS FIREMEN ESCAPE ON STEAMER
London, Nov. 12.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, says that two officers from the German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse, which was destroyed early in the war by the British cruiser Highflyer, who were on parole, have made their escape in a Dutch steamer, disguised as firemen. The men had been lodged on a German steamer, moored in the harbor at Las Palmas.

LETTER FROM DAVID RUSSELL
To the Editor of The Standard:
Sir,—In the early part of November, 1910, a well known Halifax lady called at my office at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, and offered her services to entrap the superintendent of a well known detective agency who had been formerly employed by me and disguised on October 17th of the same year. I refused to engage her services, and told her that I did not believe the story she had told me. To my surprise I got a writ for $20,000 damages, but up to date she has not brought her case to trial.

In the meantime she commenced suits against at least a dozen newspapers all over Canada for publishing a news item in connection with her suit against me. Her suit against five of the newspapers were to have come up for trial on Thursday last in the Montreal courts, but in the request of the owners of one of the newspapers I appeared before a commission here blame Great Britain for entering the war? Germany claimed England started the war because of commercial jealousy, but in the last ten years Great Britain had made tremendous strides industrially and commercially and had no reason to fear the progress of Germany, great as it had been at the same time Britain had initiated great social reforms.

FRENCH SOLDIER RIGHT FROM THE FIRING LINE.

GEORGES PIERLOT
This picture shows Georges Pierlot, a French reservist, as he arrived in New York from France. Pierlot, who lives in Montreal, was still wearing his uniform when the vessel reached her pier, making a picturesque figure as he stood among the crowd of passengers dressed in the baggy red trousers, the tall cap and the long, shapeless coat of the French infantry. His uniform, together with a small knapsack, comprised all his possessions, and kind-hearted fellow passengers made up a collection to pay his fare to Montreal. Pierlot was among the first to be sent to the battle front. While in the fighting near Rheims he suffered a sabre wound in the left shoulder, which caused a temporary paralysis of the arm and brought about his release from further duty.

SALE OF LIQUORS IN FRANCE AND RUSSIA STILL PERMITTED
London, Nov. 12.—The opinion that Russia and France have prohibited the sale of alcoholic liquors is denied by the brewers and distillers, who point out that Russia has banned only vodka, which the government has a monopoly, but the use of wine and liquors among the troops is permitted. France has prohibited the use of absinthe, but not wine.

CHEER UP! DON'T GET COLD FEET

A Word to the Man Who is Prone to Look Only on the Dark Side of the Situation.

"Business as usual? Why not?" was a remark overheard the other day, passed between two business men. One was arguing on rather pessimistic while the other, who said the above, was arguing on a basis of sound common sense. There is nothing the matter with business. The war may have been effectual in changing it from some channels into others, but the business is all there, as strong as ever. The business is going somewhere and to make matters worse—it's your own fault. Business is a game—play it with all your might and main. Do not be afraid to spend money, for that is exactly where the trouble lays. Salaries would not be endangered if you spent your money.

You should pull yourself together and look the situation squarely in the face. Some industries have been hard hit—there is no denying that, but others have received a tremendous impetus. What the steel industry has lost, the textile industry has gained, and so on right down the list. The chemical trade has been stepped up. All right, how about the grain trade? Nothing to find fault with there, is there?

The best way to do is to find out what is wrong with your business—that is the one that matters. If everyone would mind his own business, there would be less trouble. If your service or your advertising of your merchandise is at fault, remedy it at any cost. But it is most likely that you are at fault—therefore see that you apply an immediate remedy. Do not get cold feet. That is one complaint which is disastrous. Don't give up and get the blues but jump right in and do something different—something which you have never tried before. Probably that is just the thing that will put things in their proper place.

If you think that you are having trouble with your store, eliminate the trouble. It will not hurt you or your assistants to go back a few nights and get in some real work fixing things up. Don't you suppose people ever get tired of seeing the same thing day after day? Certainly they do, they are human. Change it all around and make it look different. If a certain counter has been on the right side of the entrance for twenty years, change it to the left. The customers will look for it and at the same time probably find something else they want.

Also, get your salespeople enthusiastic. If you are, they will be, but as long as you wear that long face, they will think things are not going well and will do likewise. Probably it is more cheerful in the morning than in your store. See that this does not continue to be the case. Be enthusiastic—enthusiasm starts at the top and works down. It's up to you to see that it doesn't get side-tracked and get on the side line. Besides, don't get cold feet.—Montreal Journal of Commerce.
