INFALLIBILITY.

CURED DAILY N. B.

DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE RHEUMATISM! This statement is substantially a FACT based apon evidence in the possession of the agent, in the shape of nuncrous te timonials from past unferers, in all the walks of life, particularly from some of our most respectable citizens and trustworthy families.

States and Canada; and in this way on a basis of its merits alone—unaided by "tricks of the trade" or special efforts—it has risen to its present enviable position. Wherever introduced it has received the most flattering preference in the treatment of all rheumatic complaints. In this we are really greatful and happy, not alone because our medicine finds ready sale, and is consequently profitable to us, do we say this, but because we open a new field in medical science, and cure at once what the medical practitioners have for agres found so difficult even to releve. We fill a place heretofore unoccupied. We relieve the suffering and Minister to God's poor; we restore the laboring man to the use of his injured limbs, and save him scores of times its cost in doctor's bills; we carry contentment and gladness into the homes of the afflicted, and consequently are remembered by millions of grateful souls.

The proprietor of this medicine has walked the aisles of the hospitals in Jondon, Eng., for the past twenty years, making Rheumatism a specialty, and the prescription from which this remedy is compounded is all he ever used in the treatment of this disease.

This medicine is f r sale at all the druggists through Canada. If it happens that your druggist that not got it in stock ask him to send for it to

THE EDITOR'S STRATEGY. The story that I have to tell is about Charley White and his initiation into the "Society" of Nugget City. He is dead now, and I would say, "May his soul rest in peace," if I believed it possible that there could ever be any rest for such a restless spirit. When Charlie accepted the position of local editor of the Nugget City Times he DIAMOND RHEUMATIC CURE !! | was strongly advised to have nothing to do with it, as the risk was altogether out In its history, this invaluable Medicine occupies the most honorable position rossible for any remedy to attain. A few years since it was known only to the friends and neighbors and patients of the proprietors, and alwys sought for by them whenever troubled with Rheumatism, and in this way came to the notice of physicians generally, and through their favorable expression, and its acknowledged value as a Rheumatic Remedy, the demand f r it became so frequent and urgent as to oblige its preprietors to increase their facilities for its manufacture. Its reputation rapidly extended, and soon orders, is terrs of enquiry, letters of thanks, and certificates of praise were daily received from all sections of the United States and Canada; and in this way on a basis of its merits alone—unaided by "tricks of the trade" out an intention to "run the town" to out an intention to "run the town" to suit themselves enforing their ideas by the suit of the pay. Since the close of the war the town had received an unpleasant addition to its population in the persons of a large number of Texas roughs and desperadoes. These wild, lawless and uncontrollable men, connecting themselves with some of the worst characters from the mountains and the plains, who were always to be found in Nugget City, had expressed and carried out an intention to "run the town" to suit themselves enforcing their ideas by the suit of the pay.

and as a jour-printer all over the West and South-west. He was rather under the usual size, but wiry and muscular, with keen eyes, steady nerves and a cool head.

Charley's initiation began the second day after his arrival at Nugent City. He was standing in front of a hotel, looking at a caravan that was passing through the street on the way to the West, when he was tapped on the shoulder by a tall, big-boned, rough looking man, who asked him to step into a salon.

This man was Bill Eads, a notorious, desperate, blood-thirsty character, the leader of the roughs who had inaugurated a reign of horror in Nugget City. Charley complied with the request, and Eads, stepping up to the counter, asked him what he would take.

What is your style of fighting generally?" inquired Charley, smiling until he showed his white teeth.

"TANCY LIQUORS"

"The pistol is our best holt." "I am a pretty fair pistol shot, though I don't fight. As you and I are to be was there promptly at the appointed time, accompanied by Joe Geohegan, a compositor from the Times, a young man who was fond of fun and entirely devoid of fear. Joe carried in his pocket two stout sewing silk.

Eads was already on the ground, with a select few of his friends, and Charley requested him, as being the "oldest and best acquainted," to take the first shot. The whole potato was placed on a stump, the distance was stepped off, and Joe squatted near the stump to watch the effect of the shots.
"It's darned foolishness to shoot at such a mark as that," said Eads. "How sent horsemen to trample down laborers many shots are we to have?" at Peterloo whose only guilt was to dis-

"That's so, and here goes for a straight 'Didn't faze it!" exclaimed Joe, who ward in expressing their wonder and admiration at his skill.

"I have another weapon," he said, "that suits me better than either the pistol or the knife; but I suppose you have never seen it, even if you have heard of it. Here it is."

He took from under his coat a crooked stick of hard wood, pointed at each end—in fact, an Australian boomerang, a relic of his South Sea experience.

"What do you call that thing?" asked E ads, whose mouth expanded into a grin as he looked at the queer stick.

"That," said Charley, "is'a boomerang, as kangaroo killer, a weapon with which I can hit a man around the corner as well as if he were in sight."

"Git out!"

"You shall see I will throw its."

In the room which say hundred ritualistic gentlemen and ladies had gathered to hold a prayer-meeting! In the evening there was a ball in the same room, and then it appeared plainly what had been the final cause of the Brighton Pavilion.

I may add that a large building which George IV. erected for his stable, and whose roof is a vast dome, is now the chief concert room of Brighton, and that another public generally that he h is above all the rest might be regarded as tree on white, a hundred ritualistic gentlemen and ladies had gathered to hold a prayer-meeting! "You shall see. I will throw it at Joe, yonder, and it will turn without hitting him, and will come back to me."

Charley threw the crooked stick, and it gyrated through the air, cutting all sorts of capers, until it was so near hitting Joe that he dedged to avoid it. Then it Joe that he dodged to avoid it. Then it at dealy turned, whir'el its way back, and fell to the ground at its owner's feet.
"Now, I will throw it toward the west, and you will see it turn and hit that sapling in which I stuck my knife."
The boomerang did so, striking the young tree with some force, but not hard enough to fix itself in the wood.
Charley then threw it on the ground,
and it leaned over the praising like a living

Eads and his companions gathered around Charley as he picked up the boonerang and wiped it, and all looked at it curiously and wonderingly; but none dared to touch it. Some were of the opinion that it was alive, others "allowed" that it was a piece of witch craft, and others declared that it could be nothing less than Satan himself.

"Tell you what it is, young man," said Eads; you can shoot a pistol to win on. Eads; you can shoot a pistol to win on; you can fling a knife to beat any redskin on the perarry; you can hit a feller with that whang doodle of yours as well where he ain't as where he is; and I MISPECK MILLS, reckon you'll do. Ain't in a hurry for them ten dollars, are you?"
"Not a bit of it."

"Come around to George's to-night, and we'll have a supper. Perairy chickens, and antelope, and bufflerhump, and all the fixin's. Shan't cost you a cent, and the fixin's. Shan't cost you a cent, and I'll show you to the boys. Bring that little Irishman, too."

Charley promised to do so, and went to the supper, and was dnly introduced to "the boys," and entered into a sort of a treaty with them, the principle conditions of which were, that he should write such reports for the "tree of he alrease". such reports for the Times as he chose to write, so long as he did nothing out of

There is no doubt that the barbaric element in English taste received a fresh accession of vigor with the advent of the Georges to England. What it was cappotatoes, small and exactly similar in size and shape, one of which was whole, and the other was perforated by a bullet from Charley's pistol. He also carried a pin, to which was attached a length of the control of t able of, and what it found pleasing to the in the Pavilion at Brighton. That building may be regarded as the physiognomical monument of George IV. It is his interior projected into stone and decoration. The secret stairways and passages leading up to fictitious wardrobes, really door-ways to rooms which his majesty desired to visit, represent the prince who at Peterloo whose only guilt was to dis-"The first shot that hits the mark wins ten dollars," replied Charley.

"It's just a waste of powder and lead. I can't hit that tater at this distance, and dou't believe any man and the stone look like terra cotta, illustrate the fop who had come to which make fine stone look like terra cotta, illustrate the fop who had come to prefer figment to fact. and Joe hastened to pick it up, deftly substituting for it the perforated potatoe, which he had kept in his sleeve for that up to the gaze of the spectators.

"Could you do that again, young man?" said Ends, when he had seen the effect of the shot.

"If I wanted to brag, I would say that I could do it every time," replied Chartes, the shot.

"If I wanted to brag, I would say that I could do it every time," replied Chartes, the barbers' poles, with the archeological serpent twined around each instead of the red stripe. The Pavillon is said to have found in Mr. P. T. Barnun its only admirer. Eng lish critics have been rather that the structure looked "as if the dome of milling him. The knife would be my eapon."

"The knife is a sure card in a close srimmage."

"Yes, or at a long range if a man know how to use it Could you stand ere and throw the point of your knife into that saping yonder?"

"Not by a durned sight. I've heard of figuated and power of practice."

"Would you like to see me do it?"

"Would you li they need a power of practice."

"Would you like to see me do it?"

"B H ve I am kinder curious."

Knife hrowing was a sport with which charley White had once been so completely fuscinated that he had practiced at their service. Never were the association so well house the at until he became almost perfect in it, excelling most of the Indians, and nearly equalling the Japanese knife-throwers of the present day. He had practiced for this occasion, and knew that he had not lost the knack.

He stood at the place he had indicated, holding a heavy bowie-knife in his right and, with the blade under his waist and pointing toward his elbow. After measuring the distance with his eye, he threw up his arm and then launched it out, and the knife sped like a streak of light toward the mark, struck the saping, and hung quivering in the wood.

Charley was obliged to make two more throws for the satisfaction of Eads and the other spectators, who were not backward in expressing their wonder and admiration at his skill.

"I have another weapon," he said, with a sults me better than either the pisc."
