to get the girls to work really hard. I want them to come to talk to me if they need to. Some of them do I think, and will. But then, different personalities don't always mix, so there's always Bea, and she's a different kind of people person than I am, so hopefully she'll pick up the other side.

UNB will be losing the services of Brokopp after this season, as she is convinced that this will be her last year at this university. "I don't want to jump right into a Masters program but I anticipate that I will go back to school sometime. I just don't know when and I don't know where. If I end up going to UBC I'll try out for that team if I can, but I don't know. I will keep playing, I'll keep playing, either in the summer or whatever, but I think this is it for UNB varsity anyway." UBC's (or wherever) gain will definitely be UNB's loss.
