

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest."—

Matt. ix.: 38.

Oh, for some five hundred Elijahs, each one upon his Carmel, crying unto God! and we should soon have the clouds bursting with showers. . . . Oh, for more prayer—more constant, incessant mention of the mission cause in prayer! and then the blessing will be sure to come.—
SPURGEON.

Resolved, That we be constant in prayer and in the cultivation of personal religion, to fit us for the discharge of these laborious and unutterably important labors; let us often look at Brainerd, in the woods of America, pouring out his very soul before God for the perishing heathen without whose salvation nothing could make him happy.
