A good many people who have no piano in their homes make the point of saying they cannot afford one. Perhaps they cannot for cash down, but by our system they can.

Considering that we not only offer these exceptional terms, but also that we are sole agents for the sale of the most famous pianos of the United States and Canada, it seems reasonable to say a customer can nowhere else have his own interests served so faithfully as with us.

ATHLETICS IN THE COMING CENTURY.

Mr. J. E. Sullivan, a leader in athletic affairs in the United States discusses the question of athletics in an interesting article contributed to an American newspaper. Of course, Mr. Sullivan, like all admirers of sports is most enthusiastic even to a degree of optimism. He presents the following pen picture for the future:

He says:— That the athlete will occupy a prominent place in the twentieth century goes without saying, and that we are rapidly becoming a nation devoted to physical education is also apparent.

The prominent business men of the twentieth century will to a certain extent come from our large cities, for the simple reason that our large cities are becoming the centre of our entire world—financial and commercial—and an education that will make a leader in the twentieth century will have to be acquired in the business centres.

It is an admitted fact that the physically perfect, strong, robust man is the one best qualified to battle with this world's affairs. The result is that gymnasiums are going up all over the country, clubs are being organized for sport of every description, such as golf, cycling, etc.; in fact, everything is being done to "build up the body physically. In our new schools in the city of New York the most important part of their construction is a well equipped gymnasium. We did not have these things 50 years ago, and the business men of to-day that are prominent and elderly, did not have a physical education, but nevertheless, the majority of them came from country towns and districts where they were forced to take physical education in a natural way, such as working on the farm and out of doors and taking good care of their bodies.

That the race will become stronger and larger is also apparent, and the clearest exemplification of this was the prominence of the American youth and their superiority in physique and athletics at the international games held at Paris this year. While many exhibits from America, works of art, inventions, etc., were awarded prizes for their excellence, nevertheless, there was some doubt in some minds as to the correctness of such awards. The decision was questioned and always will be, but on the athletic field, where it required life, strength and physique, America swept the board. The many comments that were heard of the wonderful physical ability of giants like Sheldon, McCracken and Kranslein, spoke volumes for the future of the American youth.

The words of the ambassador Penler at the banquet given in honor of the American athletic victories by Commissioner Peck will never be forgotten by those that heard them. Looking around upon the athletic assemblage, he said: "These are the men that in the future will be our leaders. As they led the field to-day in athletics, so will they lead in the future our armies and our navies, and in the affairs of state."

Athletics, as it is understood, is sure to benefit the American race as it has the English race, England is a great country and the home of outdoor recreation, yet we Americans who have been only 20 or 25 years in the athletic field have excelled England to-day in many respects. In athletic competition we certainly do, though, as a people I do not think we are as much interested in recreation as they are in England. That athletics and physical education go hand in hand with the building up of the brain, no one can dispute. The old adage—"A sound body makes a sound mind"—holds good to-day. Our leading educators of the present time are so impressed with the fact that there is not a college of any prominence that has not its well equipped gymnasium and gymnastic instructor, together with its football field and crack teams with a specialist in charge of each department. Our clubs of any importance have their gymnasiums too.

The city of New York gives a fair example of endeavor to build up the youth of the present day into strong and robust men, in its playgrounds for the young. The Outdoor Recreation League has several of these playgrounds in operation. It is a model institution of its kind, is maintained by voluntary subscriptions and managed by men who devote their entire time and attention to it without any compensation.

Last year New York took up the question of public baths and swimming. All this goes to show that physical education and exercise is good for the system and that the outcome will naturally be that the next generation will be larger and stronger than the present one. If you travel the world over and see the young men that are entering upon the twentieth century, men who will be the fathers of the future; if you place them side by side in athletic competition, you will be convinced that the leaders of the twentieth century will be giants in every respect, physically, mentally and morally.

DON'T WORRY.

More vital force is consumed by worry than by work.

Don't worry over something that happened yesterday, for yesterday is beyond your reach.

Don't worry about anything that happens to-day; do the best you can, and let it pass.

Don't worry about something you think may happen to-morrow; wait until to-morrow comes and you may find there is no cause for worry.

Don't worry because you feel a little low; take Hood's Sarsaparilla and it will soon set you right.

Don't worry because you have a headache; probably your liver is sluggish, and Hood's Pills will cure you.

Don't worry because you have pimples on your face; Hood's Sarsaparilla will purify your blood and your skin will become smooth and fair.

Don't worry about your health or the health of your friends. Keep your blood pure with Hood's Sarsaparilla and your system regular with Hood's Pills, and you may depend upon having good health every day in the year.

A CHAPTER IN A POLITICIAN'S LIFE.

Mr. James R. Randall, the Southern correspondent of the "Catholic Columbian," presents the following appreciation of the career of the late American politician, Hon. John Sherman. He says:

Every paper, great and small, that I have seen, and I read extensively, agrees that the late Hon. John Sherman, despite his eminent political stations and large wealth, died disappointed, miserable, and in a degree, broken-hearted man. Strangers inherit his opinion that he toiled so persistently to accumulate. The daughter of a once poor clerk gets the bulk of it, just as the vast fortune of Mark Hopkins, who died a lunatic—went to this result in a cook and a Yankee art upholsterer. The presidency which Sherman sought so eagerly eluded his grasp, partly through what he deemed the treachery of political friends, and partly, from his own want of humility. Yet he lived to see Garfield and Alger laid low, the one by an assassin's bullet, and the other by a merciless press and embalmbed beef. He declined the Ohio governorship in 1883, but according to his most intelligent biographer, had he been Governor in 1884, "he could have been nominated for President. Had Sherman been governor he could have beaten Arthur, and then he might have beaten Cleveland. There would have been no Mugwump revolt if Sherman had been the nominee. He was again urged to run for governor in 1887. Had he done so he would have been elected, and in 1888 he, and not Harrison, would probably have been the Republican candidate for President. Thus, more frequently than Caesar refused the crown did John Sherman refuse the chief magistracy of the Commonwealth that was for so many years the Empire State of the Mississippi Valley, and at times when that office now seems to have pointed the way to the goal of his most cherished ambition."

His weak and humiliations culminated when Hanna and McKinley plied their arts and finally discomfited him. His last days must have been full of bitterness and the vanity of all he had cherished must have distracted his intellect, if it did not soften his heart. Despite his periodical coquetting with silver the record seems to show that he, more even than Boutwell, Samuel Hooper, Lindeman and John Jay Knox, is responsible for fastening, as far as it is fastened, the gold standard upon his country. Of course, the money changers applaud him for that, and it is said his portrait adorned the Bank of England; but millions of the plain or common people believe that his finance was disastrous to them and will lead if not remedied by legislation, to violent revolution. It has opened the door to Shylock and his gentle allies and bred trusts, monopolies and imperialism. It is to Mr. Sherman's credit that he finally protested against the colonial policy, but how far he was constructively responsible for it I will not say. But what was all the political scheming and the hoarding of money and the obedience to Shylock worth when the summons came to depart? Wendell Phillips, who understood the money question, is said to have died almost in despair at the work he wrought and the perversion of his ideals. Possibly John Sherman had some such glimpse, but so far as we know, beyond his own personal grievance, he died and made no sign. But he is gone and may God have mercy on his soul!

lyting, invited the priest to come into his own sitting room. After administering some welcome refreshments, this Protestant evangelizer let himself out, "To think, Father," he said, addressing the priest, "of the pride and sloth of these bishops and cardinals! Is it not monstrous? I warrant now that while the Cardinal has sent you on this long tramp through the muddy snow he is comfortably toasting his heels and drinking a good warm punch." "I think you're wrong, sir," said the priest. "You're doing nothing of the kind." "You don't tell me! But how do you know?" "I know by the best of reasons. You have never asked my name." "Your name, what is it?" "Cullen—Cardinal Cullen." In a moment the hotelkeeper was on his feet, hat off. "Will Your Eminence forgive me? I spoke in ignorance. Shall I order a carriage for Your Eminence?" "Oh, no; I can go back as I came." The Cardinal departed. A few days afterward the hotel-keeper went to a priest for instructions and was finally received into the Church.

Who shall despair while the fields of earth are sown with flowers and the fields of heaven blossom with stars? The open heart knows, in a revelation which comes to it with every dawn and sunset, that life does not mock its children when it holds this cup of peace to their anguished lips, and that into this tideless sea of rest and beauty every breathless and turbulent streamlet flows at last.
