

Latest News Events From Busy Trenton

Death of Mr. Silas Lake—Meeting of Christian Men's League—Dominion Bank Opens Branch at Trenton.

Mr. Norman Duette, who has been confined to his house for a week suffering from bronchial trouble, is much better and will be out in a few days.

Mrs. Fritz, Queen street, is slowly recovering from diphtheria. The other members of the family are around again.

Mrs. Jaa. Redick, Front street, entertained a number of ladies on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Ida Redick and Miss Zora Dufos assisted with the serving of the dainty luncheon.

Mrs. Herbert Kemp, Henry street, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Spencer, of Rednersville, over Sunday and Monday.

The residents of Trenton, who had the pleasure of the acquaintance of Mr. Silas Lake, were indeed filled with sadness when they learned that the aged man had passed away.

Mr. and Mrs. Lake were residents of Trenton and closely connected with the activities of the Methodist Church. About eight years ago they (Mr. and Mrs. Lake) became residents of Toronto, where Mr. Lake died. He leaves to mourn his loss an aged wife, and three married daughters. Mr. Lake was ninety-two years old.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Oscar P. Day, Toronto, a daughter, on Jan. 29th. Mrs. Day was Miss Edith Saylor, of Trenton. C. F. Young's home on Thursday evening.

The Christian Men's League met on Thursday evening in the Salvation Army Hall. Mr. W. Finkle, president, was in the chair. After singing and prayer Mr. E. L. Fraser read an excellent paper on "Success."

The next meeting will be held in Grace Methodist Church. The Dominion Bank has opened a branch in Trenton. They are now occupying a portion of the Sutcliffe Block.

A ground wire of the high tension broke, causing a spring across the high tension wires between Trenton and Belleville, cutting off both light and power in this district.

Every place from Belleville to Ottawa was in the west and to Trenton in the north was affected. Factories had to suspend operations and business resorted to the old fashioned coal oil lamps.

The Guide was ready for the press at four o'clock but the wheels in the press room refused to turn and it was 9:30 before the press was in motion. It did not return but if you call the office you will receive a copy of last night's edition. — Port Hope Galt.

Break in Hydro Tied Up Business

Every place from Belleville to Ottawa was in the west and to Trenton in the north was affected. Factories had to suspend operations and business resorted to the old fashioned coal oil lamps.

The Guide was ready for the press at four o'clock but the wheels in the press room refused to turn and it was 9:30 before the press was in motion. It did not return but if you call the office you will receive a copy of last night's edition. — Port Hope Galt.

Obituary DEATH OF JAS. L. FRALICK

Mr. James L. Fralick passed away at Vancouver B. C. on Monday of this week. Some ten years ago Mr. Fralick and his wife, Mrs. L. Fralick, and their two daughters, Miss Helena and Miss Kate, left Trenton to make their home in Vancouver.

For many years Mr. Fralick was prominent in the business life of Trenton. He was born in Vancouver but came to Trenton when quite young learning the carriage-making trade in the establishment of Hart & Son. He afterwards embarked in business in partnership with his brother Jacob Fralick and vehicles made in Trenton by Fralick and Brother were very numerous all over the district.

The firm continued in business until the death of Jacob Fralick, James L. Fralick married Miss Hart, daughter of his former employer. His wife died some years before the family left Trenton. One member of the family Mrs. H. U. Tobey still lives in Trenton. The others, Mr. George Fralick and Miss Helena and Miss Kate reside in Vancouver. Interment took place at Vancouver. — Picton Times.

RICHARD CROSS The death of Richard Cross occurred at his home, Bloomfield, very suddenly on Tuesday morning, January 29th, from heart failure. The deceased came to Bloomfield from Trenton, having been in the town about nine years ago. He was 69 years of age and leaves to survive him, his wife and three sons, two at home and one in Hastings county; three brothers, Stephen, of Belleville, James, of Trenton, and John, of Chatham; and four sisters, Mrs. Dale, London; Mrs. Vance, Flinton; Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Thrasher, of Belleville. The deceased was a member of the L.O.L. The funeral took place Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. from his residence, Rev. A. E. McCutcheon officiating. Interment in Glenwood.

G. T. R. Train Was Derailed

Passenger train number 99 of the Grand Trunk line between Belleville and Lindsay became derailed Wednesday night between Hoard's station and Campbellford from some as yet unknown cause. Three cars, the baggage car and two passenger cars were overturned and no injuries were received by any passengers. The baggage car and one passenger car were overturned by crew and proceeded to Peterboro arriving at 10:35 about 3 hours late. An auxiliary car, Lindsay, recalled the other coach and the track was cleared during the night. — Peterboro Examiner.

Four Islanders Each Fined $200

Kingston, Jan. 31. — Four residents of Wolfe Island were fined $200 and costs each by Justice of the Peace Hunter Thursday afternoon, on the charge of having liquor for sale. The case resulted out of the arrival of twenty-seven cases of whisky on the island which had been imported from Montreal and which, it was thought had been intended for the U. S.

Sam Hogan, Patrick McDermott, Ed. Kelyand John Allison were all found guilty on the charge of having liquor for sale, and were assessed by Justice of the Peace Hunter. It seems that some time ago 27 cases of liquor arrived on the island, addressed to "Island residents. The matter was learned by Inspector MacCannion, and he made a journey to the island, seizing the liquor and summoning the men before the magistrate. This morning a number of witnesses in each case were heard and the men were found guilty.

O. R. Webster conducted the prosecution while A. B. Cunningham defended the prisoners.

Lindsay Juniors Annex Group by Five Goals

Lindsay, Jan. 31. — By defeating Peterboro Juniors by 7 to 4, the local Middlets annexed district honors by five goals. The game was fast and furious. Referee Whitehead being quite lenient. The Middlets used their weight effectively on the visitors. Lindsay led the score in every period, but the visitors battled hard in the first forty minutes. Garrett in the local defense man, was the star. Bell and Stoddart also doing well. Sheehan on the Peterboro defense was their best man.

Peterboro—Goal, Burgoyne; left defense, Sheehan; right defense, Lawson; centre, Collins; left wing, Foley; right wing, Thornback; subs, Jackson and Raeger.

Lindsay—Goal, McClory; left defense, Green; right defense, Garnett; centre, Bell; left wing, Stoddart; right wing, Chambers; subs., Kelly and McElroy.

Referee—Lawson Whitehead. Belleville plays Lindsay as a result of Lindsay's victory over Peterboro.

It is Not Influenza But Just Plain Grippe

Ottawa Doctor Says No Recurrence in This Generation of Epidemic.

Ottawa, Jan. 31. — "There will be no recurrence in this generation of the flu epidemic." Such is the hopeful conviction of one of Ottawa's foremost physicians, Dr. H. C. Church. "Chicago and New York haven't got the flu at all," he declared. "The case reported so faithfully from day to day in such numbers are nothing more or less than what is popularly known as is grippe."

"The symptoms are no different, and the death rate is no higher than the old more familiar affliction. "If my Ottawa practice I do not know of one person who had been attacked with the flu who has had a recurrence. The attack seems to have made immune those who only fell victims and survived, while those not attacked are not susceptible to the disease."

"This scourge is mysterious and disconcerting. But a generation or perhaps many generations will elapse before it comes again in the deadly form in which it came in the year of 1918."

John Hazel Warden on First Ballot

Mr. John Hazel, Reeve of Picton was elected Warden of Prince Edward county on Tuesday the first ballot giving Mr. Hazel a clear majority. It is something unusual in Prince Edward county for a Warden to be elected so promptly. The election usually runs into the second day of the session. After his election Warden Hazel addressed the Council and an adjournment was made to Wednesday. The new Warden is not new to municipal politics. He was Reeve of

Strain of Driving Causes Auto Accidents

By Dr. L. E. Hirshberg. Full many an automobile accident, both to those within and outside the car, are due to a lack of co-ordination of unevenness of thought and action which follows the strain of driving. Obviously to prevent such dangers, you must know some of the signs of the overflow of gland juices.

When the adrenal glands begin to add extra steam to their central station, there occurs a rise of blood pressure, a rigid fixed condition of the muscles, and some tension in your hands, fingers, feet, wrists, and the cold arouses itself, bulging eyes, trembling muscles and a rapid pulse appear. The presence of any of these signs means you must relinquish the wheel for a few weeks any way.

An extraordinary and frequent observation, as yet unexplained, is that people who take a few drinks before a motor ride frequently show signs of quick intoxication, whereas, if they sit quietly after a few drinks they may not appear drunk at all. Many colds, injuries and avoidable accidents may be justly traced to liquor drinking before a ride.

Granulated eyelids, "pink eye" and other eye maladies associated with motoring have their origin in sharp cutting winds, wind pressure, flying dust, bacteria and very small insects. Soothing applications of white vaseline into which has been melted 15 grains of boric acid to the ounce, will cure these troubles.

Few owners or salesmen of automobiles know that four or more men in every hundred are color blind. Women, happily, do not suffer from this defect, but they may pass it on by heredity to any of their sons.

The eyes of color-blind persons do not possess power to distinguish red from green and other colors. Although it is legal requirement for all motor tests for color blindness for all those who are employed on railways vessels and similar common carriers.

On the other hand the inevitable and the boy appears, comely but "dancing girls, ah! — ver' good!" You pass through a lighted street, with native cafes, and you stumble up a rickety staircase, feeling that romance must be waiting at the top, and buy an officer's ticket for the apparently reasonable sum of one rupee.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

On the other hand the inevitable and the boy appears, comely but "dancing girls, ah! — ver' good!" You pass through a lighted street, with native cafes, and you stumble up a rickety staircase, feeling that romance must be waiting at the top, and buy an officer's ticket for the apparently reasonable sum of one rupee.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Want Hydro-Radial From Picton to Trenton

Bloomfield and Hallowell Councils Ask for a Conference.

Trenton, Jan. 31. — Bloomfield Municipal Council passed a resolution requesting the Hydro-Radial Commission of Ontario to complete estimates for a Hydro radial line from Picton to Trenton, and asking the Commission to name the earliest date when it will meet the Bloomfield Municipal Council, with other municipal councils interested, at a mass meeting at Picton. The Hallowell Council passed a similar resolution.

Dance Girls of Bagdad

There are few cities as wonderful as Bagdad at night, as you sit on the veranda of the club sipping the first peg of the day. After the first of your tennis your senses are lulled by the magic swirl of the "Tigris" as it flows swiftly on its 700-mile journey to the sea, lights twinkling on the right bank appearing among the palms, as the Arab laborers return home from their day's work, compelled to work by lanterns.

Your eyes are attracted by a brilliantly lighted house at the far end of the old Turkish bridge of boats, according to the London Times, apparently the roof is gilded, and white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

On the other hand the inevitable and the boy appears, comely but "dancing girls, ah! — ver' good!" You pass through a lighted street, with native cafes, and you stumble up a rickety staircase, feeling that romance must be waiting at the top, and buy an officer's ticket for the apparently reasonable sum of one rupee.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Curious eyes are turned on you as you enter the roofless hall, open to the velvet sky; a native, clad in an adorning burrows, shows you to a wooden bench in the front row occupied by a few self-conscious British subalterns. The stage is apparently built of old biscuit tins — which are now to be strictly accounted for by army units — only a narrow strip of white figures are seen to dart hither and thither on a tiny stage; occasionally you hear a strange melody across the water by a fragrant breeze, like the croaking of a child rising and falling to the notes of some instrument. From afar it is typical of all that is eastern, and so romantic, so quaint. You feel inclined to investigate this strange place and to see if romance is found in an Arab theatre.

Funeral took place on Tuesday from his late residence on the Town Line, and interment took place in the R. C. Church cemetery, Bancroft. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Labarge in this their second bereavement inside of a year. — Bancroft Times.

DESERONTO. Mr. Marcel Anderson of Milwaukee is in town. Mr. Arthur Sharpe is out of town on business. Miss L. Bradshaw spent the last of the week in Ottawa. Mrs. A. A. Stewart is visiting her brother at Schenectady, N.Y. Mrs. Howard Van Dusen is spending a few days with her husband in Toronto. Mrs. Harry Langbauer and little son Jack of Belleville are visiting her uncle Mr. A. S. Vaiseal. Joe Shanfield was in Toronto on business last week. Mr. J. G. Clement of Collinsville has been on the sick list this week. Miss Wright, one of the public school teachers, resigned last week and left here for her home in Toronto. Mrs. W. E. Satterthwaite (nee Pauline Dale), of Belleville, is visiting Mrs. J. Howard Van Dusen before leaving for her home in Willenhall, Staff, England. — Deseronto Post.

PICTON. Miss Mary Kellogg has accepted a position with Office Furniture and Supplies in Brockville. Mr. and Mrs. F. Farley of Trenton, attended the funeral of her aunt, the late Mrs. Catherine German on Thursday last. Mrs. Arthur Tripp and baby Marie of Montreal, are spending a few days visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Tripp Elizabeth st. Miss Evelyn Hefferman of Rochester is expected to arrive in this town in the near future to take a position with the Fraser staff. Mr. Harry Leavens is recovering after a recent operation at Picton Hospital. Mrs. E. Metcalfe is recovering nicely from her recent accident having broken an arm. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald H. Murdock of Trenton were last week the guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. Edward Souther of Bancroft. Mrs. Dr. Frank Farley of Trenton was in town Thursday attending the funeral of her aunt Mrs. Catherine German. Mr. H. E. Mastin of the F. W. Woodworth Company has been transferred from St. Catharines where he has charge of a much larger store. Mr. and Mrs. Mastin have been in St. Catharines since last week. Captain M. Palmateer was suddenly called to Orillia on Friday owing to the serious illness of his sister, Mrs. A. Hicks but on his arrival found she had passed away a few hours before. Mr. W. S. Blakely has taken over the business of the St. Lawrence Paper Co., Picton and is planning to install new equipment making it the most up to date creamery in Ont.

The Annual Poultry Show opened yesterday in the Armouries with a note filled with entries than ever before and a good crowd in attendance. The Annual Banquet will be held on Friday evening. Mr. W. E. Sinden, Sudbury, spent over the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sinden. Mr. Sinden has been in Toronto representing the Nickel Belt Motor Club at the Motor League Convention. Captain the Rev. Harold Stainton now pastor of Methodist Church Mill Ford, Prince Edward Co., reports an interview with a Baptist priest at Colombo Ceylon, a few months ago during which the priest declared his astonishment were enthusiastic liars in Nazareth the priest regarded as a grand character; but Buddha's teaching that life is a cure, he thought worth hearing the truth. The Forward Movement enables Canadian citizens to bring relief to the Empire's millions in India. — Picton Times & Gazette.

WEST HUNTINGTON. All the auxiliary on the Huntingdon circuit were invited to attend an open meeting on the 23rd at W. H. King's Methodist Church, but owing to the stormy weather the date was changed to a more favorable time. Miss Elizabeth Domara entertained a few of her old schoolmates at her home in Stirling one evening the latter part of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cotton visited their old home at