

When in Bed

Put some Vapo-Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the lamp and place it near the head of the bed. Then all the time the baby sleeps it will breathe-in the healing, soothing vapor. The hard, tight cough loosens; the fever gradually goes down, the breathing becomes natural, and pneumonia is avoided. Every part of the throat and bronchial tubes are touched by the medicine. For the hard colds and coughs of children nothing equals Vapo-Cresolene.

Vapo-Cresolene is sold by druggists everywhere. A Vapo-Cresolene outfit, including the Vaporizer and Lamp, which should last a lifetime, and a bottle of Cresolene, complete, $1.50; extra supplies of Cresolene 25¢ and 50¢ each. Illustrated booklet containing the important testimonials free upon request. Vapo-Cresolene Co., 130 Fulton St., New York, U.S.A.

Foot Light—There isn't a redeeming feature in the whole show.

Sue Brett—I thought there was a pawnbroker's scene in it.

Yeast—Does the janitor furnish you with any heat in your flat?

Crimsonbeak—Does he? Why, when the steam pipes are cold I kick, and he comes up stairs and gives me a talk that makes me hot in a minute.

Patience—They call him a Jonah.

Patience—Well, it's too good for him. No self respecting whale would keep company with him for three days and three nights.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—And you say she's an unreasonable woman?

Mr. Crimsonbeak—Is she? Why, if she went down to the Stock Exchange she'd expect some of the men to get up and give her their fifty thousand dollar seats!

Patience—He must have a soft spot in his heart for me.

Patience—Why so?

On the Four-Square Plan

The four-square plan means that all customers regardless of rank or station, receive the same careful attention and treatment at our store. We are as particular with the child who is sent to purchase some small article, as we are with the experienced adult. We never substitute inferior drugs when filling your doctor's prescriptions. We never recommend the "something just as good."

By Our Own Pen Morgan.

At the banquet in his honor in Toronto last week the Hon. William Mulock rounded off his peroration with these lines, which he ascribed to Kipling:

"It's only an old bit of bunting, it's only an old tattered rag, but soldiers have died for its honor, and time has ennobled the flag."

It is our good friend Mr. J. C. Morgan who was the author of this stirring stanza, and not Mr. Kipling. Mr. Mulock owes Mr. Morgan an apology. Kipling is not the only poet of Imperialism—Orilia Packard.

Origin of Indian Summer.

There is an Indian legend to the effect that after the first frosts Manitou resorts to the island in the Georgian Bay which is called after himself, and not Mr. Kipling. The autumn haze which is seen in Indian summer is the smoke from his pipe, and the warmth is the heat of it. More than a century of our Canadian poets have enshrined the legend in appropriate verse.

BY THE LITTLE ONES.

A Number of Bright Sayings Out of the Mouths of Babies.

Little Harry came running into the kitchen with both hands clasped tightly over his stomach and exclaimed: "Mamma, give me a piece of cake, quick! I've got an awful pain in front of my back!"

Willie—Mamma, is it wrong to tell tales about people?

Mamma—Yes, dear.

Willie—Well, then, I won't say nothing, but if sister ever slaps me again there is going to be trouble in this family.

Mamma—I can't understand why you think Nellie is selfish. I think she is an unusually nice little girl.

Ethel—Yes, but she's selfish all right. She just gets up at the head of the class and won't let any of us pass her.

"Oh, mamma," exclaimed little Margie, "Tommy has taken a penny out of my bank!"

"Tommy, you naughty boy, why did you take a penny out of your sister's bank?" asked the mother.

"Cause," replied Tommy, "I couldn't get a nickel out!"

Three Times and Out.

Mrs. Fosdick was sure she heard the crash of breaking china in the kitchen, but she felt she must be mistaken when she entered and saw the joyous face of her cook.

"Oh, I'm so glad I've broke it, mum," Bridget said, brimming with delight.

"Why, it's one of my best cups," said Mrs. Fosdick, surveying the remains.

"Yes'm," added Bridget cheerfully, "but I'm so glad it's done. Ye see, Oi had broke two of 'em before, an' Oi knew Oi'd have to break another before Oi quit, an' it's a great comfort to have it all done."

"Well, see that you don't begin on another three," said Mrs. Fosdick sternly. Detroit Free Press.

What He Would Do.

"What we need most in this country," said the man with the rusty clothes and the soiled finger nails, "is a redistribution of wealth."

"Well, supposing you had your way," the other answered, "how much would you claim when you went after your share?"

"When I went after it! I wouldn't go after it. Go! darn 'em, I'm make 'em bring it to me if I had my way!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND A Sure Banisher of Ills Peculiar to Women.

Dr. Philip's famous prescription, Paine's Celery Compound, has been, and is now, freely prescribed by many of our ablest physicians for the ill peculiar to women. They have found the wonderful remedy to be exactly what is claimed for it. It has proven again and again that Paine's Celery Compound is the one great cure for that form of nervousness peculiar to women, and gives to weak, rundown and suffering females a perfect and robust womanhood. All women who suffer from irregularities, hysteria, nervous prostration, anaemia, liver and kidney troubles or blood diseases, should at once give Paine's Celery Compound a trial. Its cures are happy and permanent. Miss Jessie M. Ross, Guyon, Ont., says:

"It affords me much pleasure to testify to the great good that Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I was completely run down in health, and a victim of female weakness, and after using three bottles of Paine's Celery Compound, I was completely cured. It is the best blood purifier I know of."

ETIQUETTE OF THE POOR

Incidents Showing Manners' Corruption of a Real Lady—Writers Like Dickens and George Eliot Understood It.

The poor have an etiquette of their own which is difficult to understand, because it is not easy to get the point of view. Writers like Dickens and George Eliot understood it, and showed us its humor where this was not obscured by pathos; but how few of us possess the inspired vision that can see and comprehend it! One may perhaps understand the etiquette of the tea party amongst people who, not being habituated to the luxuries of life, show a natural reluctance to emphasize their rare acquaintance with delicacies by a too rapid attack on those provided by their host. Each guest suspiciously waits for the other to begin; knife and fork may be poised in coy desire, but etiquette forbids the actual start until they are bidden to begin or "reach and help themselves."

More difficult of explanation, however, are the refinements of etiquette exhibited by our domestics. The clergyman who asserted the other day that he kept his servants better behaved than a friend of the writer. This good lady, after devotedly nursing her housemaid through a grave illness, immediately received notice of the girl's intention to leave her service. The mistress was naturally surprised and hurt. She recalled the fact that she had just nursed the girl back to health, and complained of her ingratitude. "I know, ma'am," the girl replied in all seriousness, "but if you'd 'a' been a real lady you wouldn't 'a' nursed me; and I don't care to be in service where the mistress isn't a lady." Similarly puzzling, and equally true, was the experience of a good woman of the lower middle class, who, in pity, took a servant whose facial disfigurement prevented her obtaining a situation elsewhere. But, starving, as the servant had been, she speedily announced her intention to leave, the reason being that her mistress herself had assisted her with the week's wash, and she was "not used to that sort of thing."

This attitude may explain the success with which some imperious and inconsiderate mistresses keep their servants, where kinder folk are left too frequently in the lurch. The poor are not always as grateful as they should be for the consideration of their superiors; they are apt to take kindnesses for granted. It is the rarest thing in the world, e.g., for a hospital surgeon to be thanked for his care of the poor. He may have been most anxious in his attendance, have performed a great operation, have had his days or even nights broken by the claim of some poor sufferer, but gratitude is the last thing he expects. The poor are difficult to understand, as they are grateful enough to each other for mutual help.

One encounters some weird experiences in funeral etiquette. In memorial notices add much to the gaiety of nations; and this outlet for let-out poetry in the population has made the poet's corner profitable to the newspapers. This, however, is less puzzling a manifestation of affection than is the anxiety of the poor to lay out their deceased friends. They will sit round the door, almost, waiting for the patient to die, in order to secure the privilege of laying her out, as they "laid out" their mother before her; not to mention her sister, Polly. I suppose this gruesome pleasure has evolved from the sympathetic desire to give and the departing friend a good send-off. The poor are not so much out of touch with their own case. It is a thousand to one, that the officiating priestess has had disclosed to her long before the deceased's bottom drawer, with the white stockings and other accessories carefully put away for the final rite.

The funeral baked meats, too, are rigidly prescribed. Indifferent port wine is set out with long sponge biscuits, and all may be flavoured by a hint of tobacco on the table, over which the parson is to bend his head in prayer before the procession leaves the house. On the return it will be consumed with the virtues of the deceased or otherwise be canvassed in crude truth.

That anything less than a pair of black Flemish mares should draw the hearse is not to be thought of for a moment. It would make the corpse "grave from his grave," to quote the remark used on one of these occasions when the omission was suggested.

The etiquette of visiting is severe. We cannot expect Mrs. Brown to visit Mrs. Jones if the latter woman has not so much as "crossed her doorstones" since Mrs. Brown's previous call. If a colander has been borrowed, it is set against the use of a mangle when a domestic breakdown occurs. When some crisis has necessitated assistance, it is docketed for exact repayment by a similar courtesy, when occasion shall offer. Many of the little meannesses of higher social rank are reflected in the jealous customs of the poor; but in the latter case they are more justifiable since there is less margin for generosity and limited resources call for a watchfulness in outlay and service that would never be felt by the rich. And thank Heaven! the great calls for sympathy and help, for guidance, kindness, charitable feeling, and a hesitating response call for no evasion of duty.

The heart goes out in good feeling; the hands, wearied with toil for the home needs, toil again for the need of another. The scanty purse pours out its mites for these in want. The trivialities of etiquette break down nobly beneath the stress and strain of humanity; and the heart, knowing its own bitterness, responds heartily, ungrudgingly, to the cry of distress, forgetful of all but the need and the recompense.—Liverpool Post.

When a horse picks up a nail in his foot what does the driver do? Does he whip the horse, limping, lagging animal and force him along? Not unless he wants to ruin the horse. At the first sign of lameness he jumps down, examines the foot and carefully removes the cause of the lameness. What is called "weak stomach" is like the lameness of the horse, only to be cured by removing the cause of the trouble. If you stimulate the stomach with "whisky medicines" you keep it going, but every day the condition is growing worse. A few doses sometimes of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will put the distorted stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition in perfect condition. Ninety-eight times in every hundred "Golden Medical Discovery" will cure the worst ailments originating in diseases of the stomach. It always helps, almost always cures. Queer Use for Thistle-Down.

This country is not the only one where unconsidered trifles are snapped up by manufacturers and put to practical use. In China the down of the thistle is gathered and mixed with raw silk so ingeniously that even experts are deceived when the fabric is woven. It is also used to stuff cushions as a substitute for eiderdown, and a very good substitute it makes.

Australia's Cattle King.

The cattle king of Australia owns more than 1,000,000 acres of farm land, and leases about 1,000,000 more. He is an Irishman named Samuel McCaughey, who in 1850 landed in Australia almost penniless. One of his farms on Darling Downs is 40 miles long and 36 miles wide. His chief business is raising sheep.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is the Great Nourisher for Body and Brain.

The public, always fickle and changeable, has, after testing Malt Breakfast Food, as a flesh and muscle producer, and health-giver, for one year, come to the conclusion that it is the great nourisher for body and brain. The history of cereal foods in Canada, the history of Malt Breakfast Food has achieved in the families of Canada. This delicious and healthful breakfast food has quite captured a fickle public, who in the past required a continuous weekly change of grain foods, not finding any one of them satisfying. Grocers everywhere who sell Malt Breakfast Food, say it gives more general satisfaction than any other food ever placed on the market. Ask your grocer for a package and try it.
