Federation Is Communicating With European Governments.

The matter of the coasting trade of the United States was brought before the Intercolonial Conference by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

According to the coasting laws of the United States, no foreign vessel can proceed from port to port of the United States.

Those entitled to such privilege must have been built in the United States, and carry the United States flag.

States, and carry the United States flag.

The coasting trade of Great Britain is open to all vessels. The restriction in the United States goes as far as to declare a voyage of some 12,000 miles from New York around Cape Horn to San Francisco to be a coasting voyage, and as such restrict it to vessels earrying the United States flag. When the United States took Porto Riea they immediately applied the coasting laws to it, so that no mails or passengers could be carried between that island and the United States, mleas the United States flag were carried.

Discussed at Conference. This matter has been brought to the notice of the Imperial authorities, and it was discussed at the last In-tercolonial Conference. Nothing was and it was discussed at the last Intercolonial Conference. Nothing was done in the premises.

In local shipping circles, not a great deal of importance is attached to the matter. The policy is frankly a selfish one, intended to encourage the growth of native shipbuilding. Canada, according to a member of the Shipping Federation, suffers somewhat from it on the upper lakes, where the United States boats out-number ours; but even if there were reciprocity, which Sir Wilfrid Laurier desires, the United States, with their greater facilities for shipbuilding, could easily swamp us. It may be greater facilities for shipbuilding, could easily swamp us. It may be said, however, that the Shipping Federation is in communication with the important European Governments on the question.

Gave Mutual Privileges. Gave Mutual Privileges.

In connection with this subject, it may be stated that in 1815 a favored nation treatment was entered into between the United States and Great Britain, giving mutual privileges as to the use of ports, rivers, free communication, etc. And yet, notwithstanding this treaty, while an American vessel could proceed to London and take cargo for India, an English vessel could not go to New York and take a cargo for any other portion of American territory.

England, in fact, gives access to the American to all her ports in any part of the Empire, while the latter refuses reciprocity of treatment.

Teachers' Visit Prevented.

Some regret will be telt by the teachers of Ontario who expected that arrangements could be made by Mr. Altred Mosely, C. M. G., with the steamship companies to enable the visits of British teachers to Canada last year to be returned by Canadian teachers. A letter from Mr. Mosely has been received by the Deputy Minister of Education, in which he says: "I regret to say that I find it will be impossible for the Canadian and American teachers to visit. Europe this Fall. The matter was all arranged as far as the English, Canadian, and French lines were concerned, but to our surprise the German lines stepped in and refused to acquiesce in the arrangements, and, as all the steamship companies work in a combine on this and many other questions, they have succeeded in stopping what I venture to think would be a most useful piece of work. I can only hope in the future that the difficulties will be overcome, and I trust it will be possible to arrange for some other year." Important Agreement Between U. S. and Cathelic Church.

Washington, July 13.—An agreement has been reached between the United States Secretary of War and the representatives of the Catholic Church in the Philippines Islands regarding a number of important matters of controversy which will obviate the necessity of prolonging threatening vexatious litigations.

Regarding the landed properties, the agreement, provides that the Catholic church, through the archbishopric of Manila, shall possess in absolute title the land and property pertaining to the hospital of San Jose, the hospital of San Jose, the hospital of San Jose, the College of San Jose in Cavite and the College of Santa Isabella. These properties are valued at $2,066,000.

The church relinquishes to the Government of the Philippines all claims and demands upon the estate of Santa Potenciana and upon the hospital and foundation of San Lazaro, except that the archbishop is to retain possession of the block in which the present Santa Cruz Cemetery is situated, and of fifty hectares, north of the hospital.

ed by the Lucifer.

After drifting about in mid-Atlantic for a week with her deck awash and her crew suffering severe privations, the oil tank steamer Lucifer, 2,473 tons, belonging to the Bear Creek Oil and Shipping Company, Liverpool, sank. Her crew of thirty-three all told, and three cats, were saved, and have been landed at Falmouth. The Lucifer left New York for Dublin on April 5, and four days afterwards it was discovered that there was a leak under the stokehold. Steam pumps were set to work, and coped with the inflow, and Captain Wilson was confident that his men could discover the leak and stop it. On April 12 an American liner was sighted, and Captain Wilson signalled asking his condition to be reported, but declining assistance. That night he had reason to lament his independence, for a assistance. That night he had reason to lament his independence, for a heavy gale came on, the leak increased, filling stokehold and engineroom, putting out fires, and rendering his vessel helpless. Fortunately the steam pumps were kept going by means of a donkey boiler on deck, but the water sained so rapidly that steam pumps were kept going by means of a donkey boiler on deck, but the water gained so rapidly that the erew had to assist by baling out with buckets. Over eight hundred tons of oil were pumped into the sea, and by this means the Lucifer was lightened, though seas swept her deck and the plight of the crew was pitiable in the extreme. Signals of distress were flown by day, and flare burnt by night, and two vessels passed without apparently noticing the signals.

Boats Were Got Out.

Beats Were Get Out.

All the boats were made ready for launching and provisioned for twelve days, but as the mountainous seas continued Captain Wilson realized that it would be imprudent to launch the boats except at the last extremity. While the vessel was being buffeted about two steamers hove in sight. Rockets were fired, but both steamed away without attempting to offer assistance. On the night of April 16, seven days after the Lucifer had sprung a leak, the steamer Sagami made her welcome appearance. The seas were still too boisterous to attempt a rescue that night, and Capt. Wilson signalled that he thought he could keep his vessel afloat till daybreak if the Sagami would stand by. This the captain of the Sagami consented to do, and at daybreak called for volunteers to go to the rescue of the distressed crew. Third officer Wallace and five seamen responded. That a boat would live in such a see was doubted, but the gallant fellows never hesitated, and those on board the Lucifer, anxiously watching their would-be rescuers, were momentarily dismayed as they lost sight of the boat.

But it came up again on the crest

But it came up again on the crest of a wave. The work of getting along-side was hazardous, for it was feared that the little craft would be smashed against the partly-sunken steamer over whose decks waves were sweep ing. A boatload of the Lucifer's crev ing. A boatload of the Lucifer's crew was safely transferred to the Sagami, and a second trip was made, again successfully, amid the cheers of their shipmates. One of the Lucifer's life-boats took off the remainder of the crew, the captain being the last to leave. Though the men lost all 'their belongings, they remembered the dumb creatures and brought off three of the ship's cats. Before leaving steps were taken to ensure the sinking of of the ship's cats. Before leaving steps were taken to ensure the sinking of the Lucifer, and the vessel was seen to go down stern first. With his normal crew of 42 increased to 75, the captain of the Sagami found his stores seriously taxed, and short rations were ordered. In this predicament he signalled to the captain of the passing Holland-American liner Potsdam, asking him to take off the Lucifer's crew. He declined, stating that he already had a full complement of passengers. The Sagami proceeded, and off the Cornish coast

Teld Remantic Story.

A "Daily Chronicle" representative found among the survivors a Cornishman, who told a romantic story. "I am a native of Helston," he said, "and my people live there now, but I shall never go back there again." There was a sigh and a moment's silence. "You see," he went on, "I ran away twenty-two years ago, and I have never been home since, and never shall. I go by the name of Smith, but my proper name is —," and he mentioned that of a well-to-do Helston family. "I took my first ship at Falmouth, and this is the first time I have been back in the port all that time. I have been ship wrecked three times, and have been in some tight corners, but I have never had our clothes off or a wink of sleep for a whole week, and when we had a bit of leisure time we played eards on deck to keep up our spirits, though it was a hard job to shuffle and deal cards as thy were wet. One of the bravest was a youth who had never been to see abefore, and he played cards though we all believed the ship was sinking beneath us at the same time. We all looked upon Mr. Wallace, of the Sagami, as a hero, for only those who saw the seas running can realize what risk he ran in launching a boat." "Won't you go to Helston and see your people? They are certain to welcome you home again after twenty-two years." "No". I shall never go there again. Butbut, when you go to Helston next time, you might call and tell mother you have seen will, and that he is all right. "Then this wandering Cornishman turned away with tears in his type."
