

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 21, 1895.

Presentation to Principal Oakes.

On Thursday evening of last week Principal Oakes was the recipient of a handsome gift. The members of the Senior class of Horton Academy quietly took possession of the parlor, to which Mr. Oakes was summoned from his study by a song of welcome.

As I have been appointed by the class to perform this duty, it becomes a pleasant task to speak the mind and appreciation of this body of students.

It is not because of the intrinsic value of the gift that we would ask your acceptance of it, but on account of what it is an expression of.

Accompanying the address was an elegant gold mounted ebony case inscribed as follows:

Presented to I. B. Oakes by The Graduating Class B. C. A. 1895.

Principal Oakes, who was so completely surprised, spoke feelingly of the great kindness and thoughtfulness of the class in presenting an address, expressive of so much good will, and a gift of so much beauty and value.

Resolution of Sympathy.

The following resolution of sympathy was passed at a recent meeting of Wolfville Division, and ordered to be published in THE ACADIAN:

Whereas God in His divine providence has seen fit to call from our midst to His eternal rest our honored friend and beloved brother, J. W. Hamilton, who for so many years was an esteemed member of the Wolfville Division, S. of T., No. 112, and acceptably filled some of the highest offices which this order could bestow; therefore

Resolved That we, the officers and members of Wolfville Division, place our heartfelt sympathy to the relatives of our departed brother in their bereavement, as well as the great loss we have sustained in the death of one who had done so much for the cause of temperance in this community.

Signed on behalf of the Division, G. Y. BARR, Secretary; H. G. HARRIS, Committee.

A Respected Citizen Dead.

The angel of death again visited our town, this time claiming L. P. Borden as its victim. Deceased had been a sufferer from consumption for a long time, and although it was known that the end was near the sad news Tuesday morning that the spirit had taken its flight about 1 o'clock was a shock to the community.

Deceased was born at Grand Pré, Kings county, Nova Scotia, on June 15, 1845. He moved to this place about nine years ago, and by his sterling qualities won the respect of all with whom he came in contact.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon from the M. E. church, of which he was an active member. Rev. C. E. Irons, assisted by Rev. Arthur Hicks, conducted the services, after which the funeral procession moved to the Old Fellows cemetery, where the remains were laid away beside his daughter who had passed away but ten weeks before.

Mr. Borden leaves a wife and two sons to mourn his loss, and the heartfelt sympathy of all is extended to them in the great afflictions they have been called upon to endure the past few weeks.

An Echo from Lonely Land.

(FROM AN OLD STUDENT'S NOTE BOOK.)

I wandered away through a budding wood, Within me my heart was gay, And I sang of love, and I sang of blood, And beautiful was the day.

I saw where the partridge had built her nest, I heard the song-bird's lay, I picked the cowslip in damp mossy places, And beautiful seemed the day.

At once a clear space burst to view, Once home to some settler's grey, By a sward in either an apple tree grown - And beautiful alone the day.

On the tree were buds, unbroken yet, For the year still clung to May, Light green the cedar, once black as jet, And o'er all the beautiful day.

My thoughts were flitting here and there Like swallows in their play, Like humming of Knight and lady fair, Oh! beautiful was the day.

A blossom I saw in the old apple tree, Full-blown, pink-tipped, and gay, I plucked - I smelt - as wood sprites do - Flew Beauty from the day.

To the lonely wood from that lonely clear day, I slowly took my way; The song birds' carol I did not hear, I thought not of the day.

On the damp, soft moss I laid my head, Deep pressing the cowslip slight, "O cruel blossom, why," I said, "Changed you my day to night?"

Acadia's breath to me you bring, You call me far away, Where class mates all are gathering, While lonely here I stay."

Thus on I mused of that fair land Bedecked in bride's array, And how its daughters soon would stand In silks of holiday -

Then back through the budding wood I strayed, The song bird carolled gay, The apple spray in the damp moss laid, And wearily died the day.

A. J. CAYE, Wolfville, May 27th, 1895.

Sawing Stone by Wind Power.

We have recently received a copy of Stone, a handsome illustrated magazine published in Chicago, from which we copy the following extract with reference to a provincial industry:

Illustrations are here shown of the only mill, we believe, in North America that uses wind as a motive power in sawing stone. The use of wind-mills to pump water to and fro from quarries is not unusual, but until we came across the mill here mentioned we were not aware that "Old Horses" had been called upon to contribute to the mechanical features of stone manufacture.

The mill referred to, and several views of which is shown in accompanying illustrations, is owned and operated by John Kline, Jr., of Halifax, Nova Scotia, who furnishes Stone with the data here presented.

Mr. Kline's principal reason for adopting the kind of power was because coal is quite expensive in getting to the granite, and further because with this power he could let his mill run windy nights with less attention - the wind in that region being of a more uniformly steady character than in the lower counties of the temperate zone. Thus, a material saving is effected over steam power and a larger production is assured.

The wheel adopted is 16 feet in diameter. It runs a gang of three blades in excellent shape under a light breeze. Mr. Kline figures out a positive saving over steam of three dollars a day, not counting his saving in labor, and the mill is yet an experimental one in the application of the most modern machinery for sawing stone.

The mill is set to saw 1 1/2 inches per hour, in granite, and is doing the work splendidly. It is guaranteed to furnish sufficient power under an ordinary wind, say one of five, to eight miles an hour velocity, to cut three inches an hour in the hardest granite, using crushed steel for feed to the saws. The machine works true and is under regulation to any speed desired in any wind less than a tempest.

In connection with this brief allusion to a novel mill for sawing stone Mr. Kline writes interestingly of other matters relating to the trade in the Province. He says: "You will be surprised, no doubt, when you learn that of the boundless quantity of good granite and building stone to be found in Nova Scotia, that so little of it is produced for use in building our towns and cities. The cost of working granite is so high that large contracts are rarely made. Being the largest producer and manufacturer in the Province, and the only one using steam power, I have been involved in the labor question more largely than others, and in efforts to popularize the use of granite have been at a disadvantage on that account."

We get between four and five dollars a ton for rough granite delivered in the city. The amount of granite handled in Halifax in one year is about 2000 tons, mostly for street purposes. I export largely. You will wonder when I tell you that I have sent granite to Aberdeen, but it is true. I have an order from there for a large cargo of the light blue granite, samples of which I have sent to you, and which is taken from a quarry in Annapolis county. I get for a block containing 60 cubic feet $25 a ton in Aberdeen. For smaller blocks the price at that city is about 60 cents a cubic foot; the average rate is fair and much better than we get in Halifax.

Our excellent granites could be produced and exported at a reasonable profit if capitalists would become interested in developing them. I have an arrangement with shippers here to take any quantity from five to a hundred tons at a time, so there is no necessity for my yarding stock for shipment.

Mr. Kline intends to equip his wind power mill with the latest improved machinery, and to test the full capacity of the wind-mill as a prime mover in the manufacture of stone.

On Thursday evening he addressed a large public temperance meeting, under the auspices of Mayflower Lodge, Hillsdale. Mr. H. Casavan occupied the chair, and addresses were also delivered by Messrs James Fish and H. Lawson, good impressions being made. On Friday evening, after addresses at a Temperance meeting at Ardoise, Mr. Rogers organized Victoria Lodge with 21 members, to meet on Wednesday evening, with the following officers:

C. T. - Fred Rockwell, V. T. - Jessie A. Lynch, Chap. - Gertrude Rowth, Sec. - Ida A. Lynch, A. S. - Madie Brown, F. S. - Mrs. Eliza Brown.

There are Mrs. Brown's boys all out in new suits again. I never saw such a woman. They are the best dressed family in town, and anybody would think her extravagant if the boys' clothes are made from her husband's old ones dyed over, while her own and the girls' dresses are dyed over, and many of the suits and gowns do not cost her over a dime the price of a package of Diamond Dyes.

No experience is needed to do good work with Diamond Dyes. They make beautiful colors in dyeing, and are prepared for all kinds of goods. There have been several times for different goods, such as the blankets and bedsets, which were dyed, and so success attended the use.
