His playing was parexcellence, and his hearers demonstrated their appreciation of his exhibition of mastery of the organ, by the vociferous applause with which they gave to every piece he played, and they clamored for encores, which were given.

Miss Estelle Carey, the little lady with the wonderful voice, was at her best, and delighted the audience. Mr. George Allan was heard to advantage, and like Miss Carey, was vagain and again recalled for encores, to which they graciously responded.

TO-NIGHT AT GRAND.

"Two Women and That Man" is the title of the play to be seen at the Grand to-night and to-morow evening. It is a new production, and is a story of life in Alaska during the year 1898. Two women and one man are the principal characters, one, Alaska by mame, and the other a dance hall girl known as Kate of Forty Mile, are the two women, and the man is Neil McLean, a prospector. It is around these three characters that the author has woven what is said to be a most interesting story of love and romance. The play affords a number of intensely dramatic scenes, one especially being a conversation between the holy father and the Indian. Two beautiful huskies, the dogs of the north, add to the stage pictures of the great new country. The play is said to be particularly well staged and most realistically produced. The company, as might be expected coming from a New York theatre, is a good one.

AT BENNETT'S.

"The Mysterious Hotel," the amusing comedy novelty, in which the Sleedes, the English pantomimists, are appearing this week at the Bennett Theatre, is something out of the ordinary in the line of vaudeville entertainment, and, incidentally, one of the manufacture. ntally, one of the most pleasing feat ures seen here this seasun. The act is full of pleasant surprises, illusion and mechanical devices causing some extraordinary happenings, one of the most interesting being the manner in which water apparently flows from the finger tips of the performers. The offering is full of action and is a number that will essentially appeal to children. As such it should prove a very strong matince card. Another act that will afford a good deal of enjoyment for children is should prove a very strong matinee card. Another act that will afford a good deal of enjoyment for children is that of Galetti's baboons. They have a routine of original tricks, one of the best being a trotting race in which the baboons are the jockeys and coach dogs, drawing small sulkies, the trotters. The tricks the baboons resort to as they ride around the stage are very amusing. There is a wealth of pleasing singing and dancing on the bill, the work of Mignonette Kokin, the English character dancer, making a very favorable impression.

Next week Jesse Laskey's Pianophlends will be seen here. This is on of the best musical attractions on the road this season.

PRINCE OF TO-NIGHT.

PRINCE OF TO-NIGHT.

What promises to be one of the best musical shows of the season is "The Prince of To-night," which comes to the Grand next Friday and Saturday, with Henry Woodruff in the leading role. It attracted large audiences in Toronto last week, and, judging by the demand for seats, it will also enjoy the same popularity here. The Toronto Globe says: "The stage settings are indeed worthy of comment, the scene showing the delt forest in the mythical country worthy of comment, the scene showing the delft forest in the mythical country of Lunitania being a bewildering maze of purple moonlight and woodland scenery." "THE LILY AND THE PRINCE."

"THE LILY AND THE PRINCE."

"The Lily and the Prince," a companion play to "When Knighthood Was in Flower," will be offered at the Grandnext Monday evening. It is to be presented here at popular prices, and is the first attraction of the season at the low scale. The play is said to be well acted and staged, and the performance is one in every way satisfactory.

AT THE COLONIAL.

Manager Hooley is appealing to patrons at the Colonial with a film of unany and to-morrow. It Manager Hooley is appearing to patrons at the Colonial with a film of unusual merit to-day and to-morrow. It deals with the pathetic story of Maud Muller, immortalized by the poet Whittier. Maud is courted by a man who afterwards becomes a judge. She turns him down and marries a man who is charged before the judge with murder. The scene in the court when Maud's identity and that of her husband are discovered by the judge is one of powerful intensity. In addition to this film there are four of a laughable nature. Miss La Viere is introducing a new illustrated song, called "Via Wireless," which deals with Jack Binn's successful efforts to save the republic. George Drennan and Baby Gamble have been supplied with new songs, while Levi's orchestra will play some tuneful incidental music.

The ladies invited all their friends and their friends' friends, and, well, 'tis most discourteous to refuse a lady's invitation, so what could the young men do but drop in and buy something. However, those who went were amply repaid, for the school room was a hive of the most contagious joviality and good humor, and everybody wore a substantial smile. There were all kinds of goods displayed for sale; if it were socks a young man needed for the coming winter, they were there; if he thought the room was sultry, a dish of ice cream was brought to him. Whenever one cast a furtive glance at the candy stall the smiles of the young maids in charge affected a prompt sale; and thus, by the feminine diplomacy the coffers were considerably augmented.
