July 29, 1868.

New Series. No. 38, which was a series of the series of pears to me, my lords, that if so formidable a body are confederated against the virtue or the lives of their fellow citizens, if is time to put an end to the havor, and to interpose, while it is yet in your power, to stop the destruction.

"So little, my lords, am I affected with the wonderful skill which the distillers are said to have attained, that it is in my opinion no facility of great use to mankind, to prepare palatable poisons, nor shall I ever contribute my interest for the reprieve of a murderer, because he has by long practice obtained great desterity in his trade. If their liquors are so delicious that the people are tempted to their own ruin, let us at length, my lord, secure them from this fatal draught by bursting the cicle shick contain them. Let us crush at once these artisans in human slaughter, who have reconciled their countrymen to sickness and to ruin, and to spread over the pitfalls of de-

A WATERLOO YARK.—The world has been listening for years to stories of Waterloo; but it would seem that like a certain other commodity, long since familiar to our renders, there are a few more left of the same sect. An individual who owned a small tavern near the eventful field was frequently questioned by visitors whether he did not posess some relies of the battle, and as invariably and as honestly answered in the negative. But he was very poor, and one day while lamenting to a friend not only his poverty, but the amoyance travellers gave him, his friend cut him with.

"Well' make one help the other; make some relies."
