Where Are the Underdogs Now?

The suggestion made by correspondent that the underdogs are no longer defended as they were wont to be by Mr. Coaker, raises rather an interesting question, one which the fishermen themselves had better enquire into and examine. It will be interesting to compare the sentiments of their President in earlier years with those he is professing to-day. Then the "underdogs" as he loved to style the toiler, were his chief care, and protection "graball" merchants was his prime object in life. But the Wordy President is one of the top dogs now, and an intimate told that about 50 men were wanted Bazaar. oct23,25,27 associate of the graballs whom to discharge a steamer at Murray's he roundly and soundly condemned and lashed with all the forensic eloquence of his tongue and pen. A Canine Curiosity: Two sailors at a dog show were gazing at a Skye terrier which had so much hair that it leoked more like a woollen mat than a dog. "Wich end is 'is 'ead, Tom?" asked one. "Blowed if I know!" was the reply. "But 'ere, I'll stick a pin in 'im, and you look which end barks!"

The Trade Protests.

Yesterday the Council of the Board of Trade met in the Board of Trade Rooms to consider, it was generally reported, what action should be taken reported, what action should be taken in connection with the removal of the Clyde from her regular route. The Clyde arrived here Wednesday morning from Port Union direct, and loaded a cargo of about 1700 harrels of flour for Port Union and other stores of the Coaker Co. along the north coast to La Scie. In the meantime the service which the Clyde place time the service which the Clyde plies was held up. At yesterday's meeting the outrage of changing the steamer's

Are You a Capable Woman?

THERE IS A "CATCH" IN IT. "In my next reincarnation, I hope and pray that I shall be one of the 'clinging type' of women," declared Priscilla, pushing in my direction a couple of lengthy missives, that I might mark, learn and inwardly digest their contents. The first ran "We shall be coming to St. John's in a week's time. Would you be your usual kind, capable self and send us these few articles and also find us a really comfortable boarding house at which to stay? I know I can safely trust you to find something nice for us; you are always so clever in these matters." And here followed a number of complimentary and soothing phrases, evidently intended as a sop to Cerberus.

The second letter, which was from lady on the West Coast, said: "I want you to get me my usual outfit for the Fall and Winter, but I am inable to send quite such a large cheque as usual, because business has been rather dull of late; but I know you will make it go twice as far as inyone else, so I have no fear that I shall not get all I need. If I were o ask my sister Dora to look after he matter for me she would be sure o send me a number of things that should never be able to wear, but ou," &c., &c. &c. This letter likevise concluded with words of appreiation that ought to go far towards ecompensing Priscilla for the inroads on her time, but it was evident that hey did nothing of the kind.

"Well, Priscilla," said I, "your riends regard you as a clever, captble woman, and to whom are they to turn in their need if not to you." 'That's all very well-in modertion," said she, "but a little of that ort of thing goes a very long way; air words are but a poor specific for ired feet and an aching head." "The present is no time for capable vomen," she continued. "Life is so lifficult and its general conditions so hard that the tendency is for every ype of responsibility to be heaped on hose who are likely to fulfil it most atisfactory. Who is it that suffers nost frequently from nervous breaklown? Who is it that knows not a noment's leisure, but undertakes outside work in addition to her home duties? Who is it that is called in at times of family crisis, and is regarded even as a pillar of the house at periods of domestic stress? Why the capable woman, of course. And who is it that has the really good time, who gets other folks to sew for her, work for her, run errands for her, and generally provide her with leisure for a refined and elegant life? Why the irresponsible, incapable type, who would simply go under if other people did not look after her. What is the sense of being capable and getting all the work to do?"

"That's all very true." I agreed: 'but what are you going to do about cilla, with a smile, "orders such as these are the least of my troubles; I have discovered the secret of getting them filled with complete satisfaction to everyone concerned. I simply take them down to The Royal Stores and hand them over to the Mail Order Department. They do the rest."
