stricted Reciprocity with the States.

The St. John Telegraph explains the exact meaning of unrestricted reciprocity by the device of a conversation between Brown and Jones. In the course of it Jones says: Unrestricted reciprocity means reciprocity without restriction or limit. It would not be confined to natural products, but would include all the manufactures of the two countries as well. Everything grown, produced or manufactured in the United States would pass free of duty into Canada, and everything grown, produced or manufactured in Canada would pass free of dut into the United States.

Erown—That seems pretty plain. As "It is a blessing the elections will be here before many weeks," pertinently re-marks the Hamilton Times. "Workingmen are leaving for the other side so fast that there will be none left to yote after a while." At the Liberal convention at Kingston on Monday, Mr. H. V. Lyon, a prominent citizen, stated that he was "a Grit, just out of a Tory hole," and that he was "rid of it at last." He indorsed Mr. Gunn's

The New York Tribune is undeastant to voice the sentiments of the present United States Government in the following declaration:

This much is certain—we should entertain such a proposal cordially, and should consider its probable results upon our commerce with a strong inclination to agree to it. We should be disposed to make sacrifices in Canada's interest it by doing so we could persuade the Canadians that the feelings toward us which Sir John Macdonald and his subsidized press have inspired and fed are umatural, uncalled for and absurd. The unending and malicious misrepresentation of our people and our Government which the Tory organs in Canada indulge in serves no honest purpose. Its only object is by prejudicing the Canadian public against the United States to render the Grit programme odieus. It may succeed indeing this, although recent events indicate the contrary, but if it is sustained by public sentiment it is bound to harm the commercial interests of Canada immeasurably. The customs and excise taxation of Can-The customs and excise taxation of Canada under Liberal rule was $4 to $4 50 per head; under Tory rule it has reached $6 30 per head. The bulk of this increased taxation comes out of the pockets of the working people, who get no increased wages to help them pay the increased taxation imposed for the benefit of a few privileged classes.

It is remarkable, says the Montreal Witness, with what unanimity the men who in 1878 were the loudest in declaring that if the National Policy would injure British connection, "then so much the worse for British connection," are now declaring that unrestricted reciprocity is anathema, because it "must bring about our severance from the empire." If it is traitorous to take off a duty, what must it be to put one on. The position of these men is, however, vastly different from what it was in 1878. Then they were endeavoring to secure the privilege of taxing the people for their private benefit, and naturally enough they did not permit sentiment to interfere with business. Now they are endeavoring to prevent the people from throwing off their yoke and are ready, in the name of patriotism, to have somes shot if that will save them from being despoiled.

England is a free trade country, but had high duties on wines and liquors. France had then a comparatively high tariff on many articles. RECIPROCITY.

The Exact Meaning of Unre-

No Treaty Providing for It Legal With-

into the United States.

Brown—That seems pretty plain. As—understand it now, trade would then be as free between the two countries as it now is between New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, or between Maine and Massachusetts?

Jones—Yes, in all the natural products and manufactures of the two countries.

Brown—How would it be with goods brought into Canada or the United States, from other countries? Would they pass free of duty across the border?

Jones—No; unrestricted reciprocity in the products and manufacturers of the two countries only is what is intended. If goods were first imported to the United States, from, say, Mexico, the West Indies, Europe or any other country, such goods would not necessarily pass free into Canada; or, if they were first imported into Canada, they would not pass free into the United States. They would, if sent across our border from either side, pay duty to Canada in the one case, or to the United States in the other.

Brown—Then both Canada and the United States would each have their own tariff, as against all other countries?

Jones—Yes.

Brown—And their tariffs might be different?

Jones—Yes. Each country would make different?

Jones—Yes. Each country would make its own tariff and raise or lower it precisely s they do now. Brown—Was that the case under the coiprocity treaty of 1854?

Jones—It was the case.

Brown—But suppose one

Brown—But suppose one country had a very high tariff and the other a low one, how would it work? how would it work?

Brown—That is precisely what happened at the time of the war of the rebellion. New Brunswick was for all the time of the old reciprocity treaty, from 1854 to 1866, a separate Province. You know that before confederation this Province made its own customs tariff and our duties were very low—from 10 to 122 per cent. When the war of the rebellion came on the United States were compelled to raise their tariff to 40 and even 50 and 60 per cent. on many articles. Their customs tariff in 1864 was four or five times as high as ours.

Jones—Are there any other instances of the kind?

Brown—Yes; the Napoleon-Cobden com—

Jones—And what has the Queen to do with it?

Jones-Am I to understand that the Queen must consent to a trade treaty respecting Canada and the United States? How was it with the reciprocity treaty of 1854, and the Washington fisheries treaty of 1871?

Brown—Both those treaties are ometainy declared to be treaties "Between her Majesty and the United States of America."

Jones—And we can have no treaty of unrestricted reciprocity without the Queen's consent, and that of her Government?

of 1871?

Brown—Both those treaties are officially

Brown—Certainly not.

Jones—Well, in that case the loyalty question is disposed of. THE VOTERS' LIST.
