"The small hall, with a most tiny platform, in which the meeting was to take place, was almost filled by the time the party arrived in Corstorphine.

"The Earl of Abbrdeen's children, in the care of the family butler, were among those who had gathered in the hall to see and hear the "Grand Old Man," who was delighted to welcome them.

The hall and all the adjacent streets were jammed with an enthusiastic crowd when Mr. Gladstone arrived in town, and he was given an ovation.

"At the opening of his speech heavy thunder clowds gathered overhead, darkening the hall to such an extent that Mr. Gladstone was compelled to call for lights, for which seemingly, no provision had been made. He explained that he ueeded lights as he intended to read some notes he had made showing that the Unionists poll in Scotland was about 30,000 votes, while the Gladstonian poll, including the votes wasted on Independent and Labor candidates was about 47,000 votes.

"In noting Mr. Ballour's statement that the Government had distributed dividends and the Opposition only prospectuses, Mr. Gladstone cited a dozen measures proposed by the Opposition which had been trampled on by "Ballour and his mechanical majority."

"Our dividends," he said, "were ready THE WIDEAWAKE OLD MAN. LONDON, June 7.- The Pall Mall Gazette prints the following account of the interruption to Mr. Gladstone's speech yesterday.

Mr. Usher, a brewer, began to put some questions from a huge manuscript he carried. The crowd greeted him with a storm of abuse, thinking the questions were put solely for the purpose of "heckling" the speaker. After a time the crowd insisted that Mr. Usher ascend the platform. Mr. Usher strode past the reporters' table to Mr. Gladstone's side, where, amid continued interruptions, he demanded whether the Liberal leader approved of the plan of campaign in Ireland. Mr. Gladstone jumped to his feet, and in indignant tones said that the questioner had never taken the pains to read his speeches. He reiterated that it was the Government that brought about the plan of campaign.

Mr. Usher waited until the renewed and prolonged applause had subsided and then said: "Then I understand that under these circumstances Mr. Gladstone approved the plan of campaign." Mr. Usher, a brewer, began to put som

Mr. Gladstone then began to comment on the polling, quoting figures to show that while up to the present time the Ministerial votes in London had been increased by 9,000 over those of 1886, the Liberal votes had been advanced by 20,000. That, he said, was very significant. Greenock had been won gloriously. Perth had been lost by the operation of an in-genious process of which the Liberal party had a monopoly.

prolonged applause had subsided and then said: "Then I understand that under these circumstances Mr. Gladstone approved the plan of campaign?"

Mr. Gladstone responded with intense irony, pointing and shaking his finger, "I am not responsible for this gentleman's understanding." This retort brought forth vociferous cheering that continued for three minutes. "I am responsible," continued Mr. Gladstone, "for the understanding the Almighty has pleased to lodge here," tapping his head as he spoke, "but I am not responsible for the understanding Almighty God has been pleased to lodge de in that skull of his," pointing to Mr. Usher.

Mr. Gladstone then asked whether Mr. Usher had any more questions to put. The latter then asked about the law of couspiracy. Mr. Gladstone said: "You want to entangle me in a legal question."

Mr. Gladstone next replied to a question about boyeotting, when Mr. Usher demanded: "Would you accept an alliene with the Parnellites if you could get it."

Mr. Gladstone trembled with indignation. He paused for a moment and then began: "I with, my friend, that—" Here the crowd shouted: "Don't answer." Here the question was impertinent and said he would not allow it.

Mr. Gladstone replied: "Not the present Government, for in 1887 they shot down by constabulary and soldiers three innocent men who were engaged in a liberal and peaceable meeting, and this gentleman supports them," concluded Mr. Gladstone, emphasizing his words with resounding thumps upon the table.

A resolution of confidence in Mr. Gladstone was proposed. Father Gray moved a counter resolution. Mr. Ushers seconded Mr. Gray's motion and seven votes were cast in favor of it. Mr. Gladstone, replying to this vote, said he was glad the amendment was moyed, as it tested the sentiment.

There are some 226 burgh constituencies in England, including the metropolis, and of these the Liberals held 60 at the election of 1886, winning 10 during the life of Parliament. Of English counties, which number 234, the Conservatives held at the time of dissolution 130, the Liberal-Unionists 34 and the Liberal 75. Many of these seats are held by the most attenuated majorities, and a change of a few votes may mean large Liberal gains. If the Gladstonians do not gain heavily in the English counties it will be impossible to form a Ministry, and the political situation instead of being cleared by the election will be rendered more dubious.

Mr. Palmer maintained that the workingmen at Homestead were in the right; that having expended their lives in that peculiar work they had a right to expect the permanency of their work and a right to insist upon a reasonable compensation for their services.

Mr. Voorhees attributed the labor difficulties to the Republican policy of high protection, and expressed regret that Carnegie himself had not been at the head of the Pinkerton squad instead of skulking in his castle in Scotland.

THE LARGE CITIES WILL BE INVOLVED. CHICAGO, July 7.—A committee from the Almalgamated Iron and Steel Association at Homestead has reached this city to confer with the building trades in regard to handling the output of the Carnegie mills if non-union men are employed there. The committee was assured and that Chicago union men would not handle non-union made steel and iron. The other building trades of the city are of the same opinion, and the outlook is that in a few days the building unions will cease handling steel and iron from the Carnegie mills. Committees have been simultaneously sent to other large cities in the country. BURIAL OF THE DEAD.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 7.—After the carnage of yesterday and last night the town of Homestead to-day was almost as quiet as a sleepy country village, and the interment of three of the five striking workmen who were killed in the fight was the chief evidence of the storm of yesterday. Up to 8 o'clock to-night absolutely nothing has occurred to mar the peace, which was profound. THE STRIKERS ARE MASTERS OF THE SITUA-

THE STRIKERS ARE MASTERS OF THE SITUATION, and the best evidence that they could possibly produce of their intention to protect property lies at the scene of last night's battle. The immense plant of the firm of Carnegic, Phipps & Co. stands practically uninjured. The dismantled fence around the works has been rebuilt, the yard cleared of all debris and the old watchmen of the firm peacefully perform their customary patrol.

AN ARMED PRICE. AN ARMED PEACE.

But while peace reigns to-day, it is an armed peace—a truce forced by the fact that there is nobody to fight rather than a permanent cessation of hostilities. The town is picketed, and no man can enter without his presence being noted. A cordon of watchful and intensely suspicious workmen are around the entire city. Every road is guarded. Along the river on each bank a ceaseless patrol is maintained. No boat nor party of men come along without being followed, and if it is thought worth while questioned. Railroads are watched and at nearly every street crossing from half a dozen to two score of men are stationed, while up and down the tracks were others going and coming. The men intend that the works shall not be taken by surplise. They are stronger now in numbers and death-dealing coupments. Besides this they are reinforced by the prestige of last night's success and the arrival of fellow-workmen from outside towns, bringing assurance of sympathy and assistance, physical and financial, if needed.
