Lieut, R. L. Kerr Tells of Rise, and Asks About Recruiting

Further promotions for Lieut, Louis Prikler, regimental sergeant-major of the 7th Fusiliers, who left London as sergeant-major of No. 4 Depot Unit of Supply, organized here by Capt. (now major) F. B. Eaton, are reported by Lieut R. L. (Loudy) Kerr of the Mechanical Transport, C. A. S. C. in a letter to The Advertiser.

Sergt.-Major Prikler went to France with Capt. Eaton's command, and was shortly afterwards gazetted a lieutenant of the Army Service Corps, and given command of an A. S. C. unit, given command of an A. S. C. unit, Lieut, Kerr says: Capt. Prikler, our very efficient railway supply officer, has been promoted to the rank of captain, another gain for London."

Had Long Experience,
Capt Prikler was an old Imperial

Capt. Prikler was an old Imperia Service Army man, who had 21 years service in A. S. C. branches before he came to the 7th Regiment. As has been referred to before, the regimental sergeant-majors of the 7th have a great record in the present war. Sergt.-Major McKinnon, who left with the quota of the 7th Regiment under Lieut.-Col H. C. Becher, was made battalion sergeant-major of the 1st Battalion, and has since been promoted to commissioned rank and a captaincy. Sergt.-Major T. J. Holmes, who suc ceeded Sergt.-Major Slatter (bandmaster) was the next appointee, and he has since been made a subaltern of the 7th Detached Guard here. Sergt.-Major Widdicombe succeeded Lieut. Slatter, and he is now battalion sergeant-major of the 142nd Overseas Battalion (London's Own).

KITCHENER MEMORIAL SERVICE AT ASKIN STREET

Soldiers Will Be Especially Invited on Sunday Evening to Honor Dead Chief.

Arrangements are being made for a memorial service to the late Earl Kitchener to be held on Sunday evening in Askin Street Methodist Church, which soldiers will be especially invited. Some evidence of mourning will shown in the draping of the pulpit and altar, and the music will be chosen with view to its suitability for the occasion. In addition to the pastor, Rev. Dougall, one or two officers will give short addresses.

WHY THERE IS NO NEWS

in The Advertiser today. There is a reason for this. On orders of Lieut. Col. C. M. R. Graham, commanding officer of the unit, and Capt. Nash, adjutant, newspaper reporters were today barred from the lines of that battalion.

Londoners will, therefore, have to be content with no news from the battalion known as "London's Own," and for which $3,000 of the citizens money was voted for recruiting purposes.

Commanding officers and men of other battallons have been unfailing in their courtesy to the newspapermen. The Advertiser has endeavored to print only that news of the camp which is considered right and proper. Its military page is conducted by a returned soldier who was wounded in France, and it has been favorably commented on by the officers and men of the camp alike.

How many times during the day had ve thought of those lines. And yet even those words did not adequately lescribe our situation, for right behind us, too, British cannon were energetically hurling reprisals over into the enemy's lines, making our environments veritable hell's delight. We had long since quit figuring whether the creaming shells overhead were coming or going, and were trying hard to remember some of our Sunday school lessons.

Toward mid afternoon the cannonade was ceasing, but we had not escaped scot free. In sheltered corners dead friendly darkness in order to take them overseas shortly. "Man alive," he sputtered, as he merged from his unwelcome bath, "twas a mercy that I fell into that hole, instead of the lads carrying a stretcher, for the shock of that cold water would have killed a wounded man." And right there we realized the password of the "Brotherhood of the Trenches." Deep ditches, in which some of the party had to stand in water waist deep. in order to hand the loaded stretchers over, had to be crossed, and eventually we reached the road, fervently blessing the memory of the Indian, who, in far off Canada, had taught us to steer a
