Watch Out for the "Misunderstood" Married Man, the "Love-at-First-Sight" Artist, the Sinner Who Craves To Be Reformed, and the Platonic Lover-Believe in No Man's Love-Making Unless It's Backed Up With a Marriage Proposal.

A young girl wishes to know how to distinguish genuine love from spurious; how to tell whether a man is merely flirting or means it when he tells you that you are the only girl, and that he never loved before.

Alas, daughter, there is no she-Solomon who can answer your question. Men are deceivers ever, and there is no acid test that you can apply to either their words or deeds that will infallibly enable you to know the gold from the pinchbeck.

There are men who go to see girl six times a week, who feed and ride her, and take her to shows, whose attentions are with out intention, and who merely hang around her because her living-room is a good camping place and she is agreeable company. Also there are men whose wooing would charm the very birds out of the trees, who do not mean a word they say and who merely make love because they enjoy enacting the Romeo role.

There is no sure way of judging the sincerity of a an's love-making; but, generally speaking, the worse he does it the better it is from a matrimonial standpoint. Distrust too glib love-making. If a man quotes poetry and says lovely, soulful things you may know he is flirting. But if he gets red in the face and looks as if he were about to choke on his Adam's apple while he blurts out a bald statement of the state of his affections, you may let your thoughts dally with the problem of whether you will have

It is also useful for a young girl to remember that there are just as English worsted with a box coat, single-breasted of medium length, that it behooves her to be on her guard against these.

The most common of these is the masher—the varnished-haired, pinched-in-waisted, overdressed Lotharios that you may see lounging white silk broadcloth blouse, a small against store windows and hanging around the lobbies of theatres, ogling a church wedding or be married under a floral bell at home.

The masher's methods are simple to the verge of childishness. He start of the same thit, hesh-colored stockings and dark brown shoes.

The universal flirt's twin brother is the "love-at-first-sight" man. Five minutes after you have met him he tells you that he was thrilled by a strange presentment of fate the minute he saw you. In ten minutes, he is confiding to you that you are the ideal for whom he has been searching for weary years. In thirty minutes, you are hearing the sad story of his life that he has never confided to a human being before; and within the hour

Shut your cars to the "love-at-first-sight" flirt. No affidavit goes with his love-making and no mention of the altar.

Equally dangerous is the serious flirt, who never compliments a wo man about her face. He brings her books instead of bonbons. He has long talks with her about her soul and the problems of life, but he never asks any woman to discuss with him the problem of the high cost of living and how two can live as cheaply as one.

Watch out for the married flirt. Especially if you are a business girl, get out your life-preserver when your boss or some fellow employee confides to you that he has a secret sorrow and is married to a woman who does not understand him. The trouble with him is that generally his wife understands him too well, but that's none of your affair. You don't hold the job of public consoler, and, anyway. there is no use in wasting your time, your youth and your beauty on a man who is already taken.

The most dangerous of all flirts is the platonic flirt. He is a hard boiled proposition, who goes into the game fortified at every possible point against matrimony.

He serves notice at the beginning that there is nothing doing in wedding bells, and then he feels he can go as far as he likes, If a woman is foolish enough to let him monopolize her and keep other men away, it is her own risk.

The platonic flirt is great fun because he is past master of love-making, but don't play around the fire with him unless you have an asbestos heart

But the proof of the pudding is in the eating, daughter. Never believe in a man's love-making unless he backs it up with a bona fide proposal of marriage. DOROTHY DIX.
