The strategy of the control of the c reason in vain; the public know well that men of good hard sense and firm and careful judgment are those calculated to best represent them in the legislature Mr. T. Davie is one of these; and, unlike a member for a northern district, can not only make up his mind, but stick to it; having the courage of his convictions and an incapability of being bullied into sub mission contrary to his opinion. Mr. J. H. Turner, who though an old resident, is new at politics, and expressed himself to that effect, nevertheless made the public exactly feel that he was a man of decided political opinions; but held himself, as
