Arrival of the White Liner After Pleasant Voyage-Chinese Ingenuity Exemplified.

Japanese Troops Make Short and Sharp Work of the Formosan Rising.

The why and wherefore of the Chinese pig tail has been a variety of fifteen puzzle to the average Englishman ever since the yel low-skinned, almond-eyed Mongolian has been flourishing and growing fat on this It was in connection with the arrival of the R.M.S. Empress of China that the great mystery of the pigtail was solved, and the half a dozen or more white men who went out on the Rainbow to meet the big white liner were filled with wonder and admiration if not a little envy. Each in turn went up the companion ladder, with one hand firmly holding his hat over his pompadour or Senator cut—at the top of the ladder the Chinese waited their chance to descend, each with his pigtail wound neatly round his head over his cap and fastened with a half-hitch round the starboard ear. The idea is neatness and simplicity itself. "The great inventor" being, as one of the wise men of the century has said, "some fellow who does a simple little thing nobody thought of before, and thereby saves himself a heap of trouble," surely John or Sing or Jim is entitled to a patent. At any rate no European conversion. rate no European can copy his scheme for preventing the cruising of headgear in windy weather, and that's something anyway. Upwards of a dozen old and young Chinese, all males, disembarked from the Empress here, out of 134 who made the voyage across. instructions of the Marine and Fisheries Department that the trip is made, this action being prompted by a letter which Lieutenant Governor Dewdney received recently from the British consulat Portland, asking that an official search be instituted in consequence of reports that a craft answering her description had been seen off Vancouver Island.

The letter was handed to Captain Gaudin, agent of marine, who in turn wired to the "Creole Lovers' Song." Mrs. Laird was never heard to better effect than in her rendition of "Il Bacio." The final number was a chorus, "Ave Verum," by the choir of the St. Andrew's R. C. cathedral, the solos being given by Miss McNiffe and Mr. Olivier. Mrs. C. A. Lombard acted as accompanist. Last night the U. S. revenue cutter Corwin, Captain Munger, arrived in port, her mission being identical with that of the Quadra. The Corwin came in, it is understood, for the purpose of securing a pilot, and will probably proceed to sea to-day. Speaking of his trip Captain Munger said: "I will sail along the west coast of Vancouver Island as far up as Cape Scott. The tenderers among other things, are required to explain the method by which they propose to remove the obstruction; and the contractor is to forfeit his claim for any compensation unless the work of re-moval is satisfactorily completed; the wreckage, when removal is complete, but not before, is to become the property of the contractor. As the Pedro now lies, it does not seem that to break her up and thus clear the prove a difficult undertaking. The wreck has become smaller and smaller, and now only the bow remains with the forward section of the ship running back to the fore-mast, from which each night swings a signal lantern to warn passing mariners est their vessels share the Pedro's fate.
