A Young Girl's Name Connected With the Mystery.

Over Fifty Fires in the House in One Day—The Ghost's Queer Pranks Astonishing All the Neighbors, Who Are Visiting the Scene by Hundreds—The Mysterious Doings—These Strange Phenomena Have Now Been Going On For Over a Week.

BEAVERTON, Ont., Nov. 6.—There is a story of the sleepy township of Thorah has been for the past week considerably excited by reports of curious and mysterious doings in a house owned and occupied by Robert Dawson, a reputable farmer who resides in the township of Thorah, about three miles from this village. The story, told by neighbors arriving here, was that an adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson had been ill with brain fever; that about a week ago she went into a trance and on awakening suddenly jumped up, exclaiming, "Look at that!" and pointing with her finger towards the ceiling of the house. The rest of the members on looking towards the point indicated by the girl were surprised to see the ceiling on fire. They immediately extinguished the fire and everything has been suggested that reasoning minds could explain as a natural cause for the phenomena, but the reports are so numerous and so varied that the agency and electricity have been mentioned, but at every suggestion of a ghostly presence the girl would be in a new place and destroying all topographical calculations. If it be human agency the girl would be in a new place and destroying all topographical calculations. If it be human agency the girl would be in a new place and destroying all topographical calculations.

On an asking if it was true that the girl had been ill with brain fever, Mrs. Dawson said: "The girl was taken ill some weeks ago with whooping cough, but when she was recovering from that she was taken down with another illness, and she is now again right. During the girl's illness the doctor in attendance injected into her arm a quantity of medicine, and afterwards she went into convulsions and for some time after was subject to them. However, she could not be connected with the girl's illness with the fire."

Prepared for the work. The house is still standing, but all the partitions have been removed, and the top story, and the furniture has been taken to a neighbor's. A peculiar feature was that no one saw the girl in the night, all being in daylight, and they appeared to be more numerous during the two days when the stove was out of order.

Chas. Smith Thompson and Editor Robinson of the Cannington Gleaner have visited the scene and are unable to explain the fire and everything has been suggested that reasoning minds could explain as a natural cause for the phenomena, but the reports are so numerous and so varied that the agency and electricity have been mentioned, but at every suggestion of a ghostly presence the girl would be in a new place and destroying all topographical calculations.

Excitement in the neighborhood. There is a great stir in the neighborhood, and all are politely received and given every facility for inspecting the rooms, charred and blackened, and the window in the front of the house, but no door; entrance to it being by a door in the rear through an summer kitchen.

On arriving at the house Mrs. Dawson, the wife of the farmer, introduced the girl, whose name had been mentioned in connection with these mysteries. She was engaged in washing dishes. The girl was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Dawson from an immigrant in Belleville, Ontario, some time ago. She was originally from England, where she was known as Jennie B. Bramwell, but coming to her present home she adopted the name of Jennie B. Dawson. Miss Bramwell, or Miss Dawson, is a bright intelligent girl of about 14 years of age. She is well educated and an excellent conversationalist.

After being shown over the premises, both up stairs and down, Mrs. Dawson tells this story of the girl's illness and the mysterious doings in the house.

On Monday afternoon, Oct. 25, she and her husband went to a neighbor's to spend a few hours, and on returning home in the evening Jennie informed them that the house had been on fire and pointed out the place near the chimney. Mr. Dawson, thinking there must be some mistake, went to the chimney, remained all night to watch it, but nothing occurred during the night. He went to bed, and on waking in the morning he found the house on fire. Dawson went out to the barn to load some grain to take to market, and Mrs. Dawson went out to the place in the morning, scarcely left the house when the girl, Jennie, came out shouting the house was again on fire. On entering the house they found that the west gable end was on fire. The aid of water the fire upstairs was extinguished, but no sooner had that been done than the fire broke out in several places on the wall in the room in the lower flat, and while extinguishing it there it again broke out in another place in the room in the east end—there being no visible connection between any of the fires. They finally succeeded in extinguishing the fire, but the house was a mass of ruins. The next day the fire again broke out, and as on the former day, it was extinguished in one place it suddenly broke out in some other place, several feet away.

A Fire Takes Fire. On one occasion while the fire was burning at the extreme west end of the house, a picture hanging on the wall at the opposite end of the house was on fire. The picture was consumed by the fire. On examination it was found there was no fire near it.

The family had now become thoroughly alarmed, and the fire was again extinguished. They removed the stove from the house as they had an idea that the fire was caused by it. But the removal of the stove had no effect, as on the following day—Thursday—the fire again broke out. While sitting looking at the wall fire would suddenly break out at it; a stick of wood lying in the old summer kitchen suddenly broke out in one place it would suddenly break out in some other place, several feet away.

A McARTHURITE IN CORK.

PARCEL'S LATE SEAT WRESTLED FROM HIS SUCCESSOR.

Even "Rebel Cork" Declines to Sanction the Parrotite Faction and Buries its Leader Under a Trench of Earth.

An Immense Vote Felled, But There Was Little Disorder.

Cork, Nov. 6.—The decisive battle in Cork was fought to-day and the victory is with the McArthurites.

The candidates were Mr. Martin Flavin, a trader of the city of Cork, Nationalist; Mr. John Redmond, Parnellite; Capt. D. R. P. Sarsfield, D.L., of Douglas, Cork, Unionist and the chief Orange leader of the South of Ireland.

At the close of the polling Mr. Flavin was generally credited with the victory. The poll boxes were escorted from the polling stations by troops and police. The counting of the ballots will commence in the morning.

The supporters of Flavin claim a majority of 1200 for him, while the Parnellites claim to believe that they have carried the election by a majority of 100.

The day's contest was opened with vigor, 1400 votes being cast in the first hour. The poll boxes were escorted from the polling stations by troops and police. The counting of the ballots will commence in the morning.

DRAGGED TO HIS DEATH.

An Heroic Man's Effort to Stop a Runaway Horse a Fatal Termination.

One of the most distressing fatal accidents ever caused by a runaway in this city befell a man named George Cappa yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. He was out at a butcher shop in Young-street, near Gould, his business being the collecting of grass, when he was struck by a team of spirited bays with a heavy farm wagon coming at breakneck speed directly toward him. With more than his own weight he leaped from them in order to stop the flying steed. In attempting to do so he struck him in the lower part of the body, inflicting a terrible wound. The shock rendered him helpless and he became entangled in the reins and fell under the feet of the frightened animals.

He was dragged a couple of blocks, during which time he was terribly mangled by his flying horse. The horse was eventually stopped in front of the Royal Hotel by John Kelly. The man's body was taken in an unconscious condition to the hospital, where he died ten minutes after. Almost all his clothing had been stripped from his body.
