AMONG THE POETS

GOD TO TIRED WINGS.
Here is a furry hemlock
Leading up to the sky.
Nestle here, fallen wings;
Thou hast not strength to fly.

And here's a drowsy willow,
With clear water by
Turn hither, broken wing;
Rest here, lest thou die.

Here is home, lost wing:
Here the branches sigh.
Fallen, broken, lost wing,
Lie soft; it is I.
—Anne Elizabeth Wilson, in "Eager Footsteps."

A PAGE'S SONG.
God's lark at morning I would be;
I'd sit my heart within a tree
Close to His bed and sing to Him
Right merrily
A sunrise hymn.

At night I'd be God's troubadour!
Beneath His starry walls I'd pour
Across the most such roundelay
He'd love me sure
And maybe praise.
—Thirteenth Century.

FARMERS.
I watch the farmers in their fields,
And marvel secretly.
They are so very calm and sure,
They have such dignity.

They know such simple things so well,
Although their learning's small,
They find a steady, brown content
Where some fine fume at all.

And all their quarrellings with God
Are soon made up again;
They grant forgiveness when He sends
His silver, tardy rain.

Their pleasure is so grave and full
When gathered crops are trim,
You know they think their work was done
In partnership with Him.

Then why, when there are fields to buy
And little fields to rent,
Do I still love so dearly the green
Wisdom and discontent?
—William Alexander Percy, in "Contemporary Verse."

PARIS FAVORING LONG HAIR STYLE

English Ladies, However, Think "Bob" Has Come To Stay.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Paris is trying to persuade women to grow their hair again, and shingled Parisiennes have even been induced to wear false curls with their evening frocks.

London women, however, refuse to go back to long hair, and there is no doubt that a proportion of them will never abandon the shingle. It was stated recently that Miss Viola Tres had decided to grow her hair. When a Daily Express representative asked Miss Tres how far she had completed the process, she replied: "I cannot make up my mind to let it grow longer. Once I did for a short while, and then I cut it again. I do not know any women at present who are growing their hair. They cannot make up their minds to do it."

Paris modistes declare that short hair is not appropriate to the flowing, wider skirted dresses that are to the fashion. There are two camps, one fighting for the maintenance of short hair, and the other using every influence to banish the bob and scrap the shingle.

"Bobbed hair is an abomination," said Mme. Isobel, the dressmaker. "Except in the severest of sports clothes a woman looks ridiculous with her hair shorn like a man's. She loses all her precious femininity, and only by a return to long hair will she regain her individuality. The newest evening gowns are undoubtedly fuller, with their waists almost at normal, and a woman who wears them with sleek, bobbed hair will look silly."

"Frenchwomen have learned to fluff their hair when wearing ruffles and floating tulle draperies, and to flatten it to match a slinky tube dress; but Englishwomen do not pay enough attention to this important matter. They will have to do so now that the skimpy straight-line dress is going out, or be a patchwork of styles."

"The manager of Reville believes that the length of a woman's hair makes no difference to her smart appearance. 'The same opinion was expressed by dress styles do not influence each other,' he said. 'Hair dressers and dressmakers work independently, and we are not particularly interested in the length of women's hair. By all the signs the craze is on the wane, but I doubt if the latest dress fashions have had anything to do with it.'"

The Y. P. S., of the Ebenezer United Church, Embro, met this week. The president, Burns Campbell, presided. The program was put on by the young men and Rev. C. Tanner was in charge of the devotional portion. The program was as follows: Readings, Messrs. J. McWilliam and Emory Harvey; selections by the novelty band, Messrs. W. Hanson, J. Osborne, Y. Thomas and Mr. Truetham; address on Thanksgiving, by Rev. C. Tanner; solo, Mr. Truetham; chorus by the boys.
