THE OLD CRY!

Wholesalers and others are raising the old cry about us ruining the Dress Goods Trade, by selling them too cheap. The fact is, these grumbling dry goods men pay too high a price for their goods, and most of them conduct their business in such an extravagant manner that it is utterly impossible for them to sell cheap.

PASSING THEM!

Our modern system of doing business has steadily gained on the Montreal old-fogy system every day since we opened our doors. But now we feel fairly passing, and even past, the old system that has been practised for so many years, and been so unsuccessful. This is very little to boast of, still it is very satisfactory, and has proved that old-fogyism can not stand against the modern (and we say British) way of doing things. The reason why Montreal is getting weaker in her wholesale trade is because of the determination of sticking to the old style of doing business. It would be difficult to find a class of business men in the world with less real enterprise and pluck than the Montreal wholesalers. It is for want of these two qualities that Western cities are allowed to do so much of our wholesale trade for us.
